Paris, March 26—(P)—The Third Army besieged Frankfurt on the Main today and sent its tanks crashing across the Main at Aschaffenburg into the plains of central Germany, a bare 250 miles from Russian lines.

One unconfirmed report said Frankfurt had been entered. The last "dimmed out" battle accounts hours before had placed Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's mighty shock troops six miles away. The city's radio went dead last night.

The Fourth Armored Division again had burst loose 40 miles beyond the Rhine in a sweep so swift that the Germans were caught without time to blow the Aschaffenburg bridge, 22 miles southeast of Frankfurt. The "breakthrough" division's coup was so complete that Frankfurt was hopelessly outflanked. Frankfurt, a city of 547,000, is the ninth largest in Germany and one of the Reich's greatest railroad centers.

The First Army also broke from its original Rhine bridgehead at Remagen and pushed 19 miles east of the shattered river line.

The U. S. Ninth and Second armies in and north of the Ruhr were ten miles past the river on a solid 31-mile front and battle dispatches

Planes Hunt Underground Objectives

By HENRY B. JAMESON

London, March 26—(P)—Two oil plants, a gun factory and an armored car works in southeastern Germany were attacked today by 300 escorted American bombers as the airman switched back to strategic targets after a week-long bombing prelude for the Rhine offensive.

The small force of heavy bombers split into two task forces over Leipzig. One went for a synthetic oil plant and a natural oil refinery at Zeitz, 20 miles south of Leipzig, while the other flew to Plauen, 10 miles from the Czechoslovak border, and blasted the twin war factories.

The attack was the 41st heavy bomber assault on Germany in 42 days and was part of another two-way blow coordinated with the U. S. 15th Air Force in Italy. Bombers from Italy hammered communications in Austria, the German radio reported. Russian bombers attacked Berlin. Russian bombers attacked Berlin. The American bombers yesterday launched what may be one of their toughest assignments—hunting out and blasting German underground factories and warehouses.

LaGuardia Silent On Curfew Issue

New York, March 26—(P)—Mayor F. H. LaGuardia added his usual Sunday punch to the city's happenings by stirring up news in four different directions during his weekly radio broadcast yesterday.

Unruffled by the apparent collapse of his week-old attempt to extend the city curfew to 1 a. m., the mayor made no mention of it in his speech, but turned his unpredictable attention to sports, the sales tax, meat shortage and an invitation to visit Gen. Charles De Gaulle in Paris.

La Guardia said that he would ask the state legislature to permit New York City to increase its present one per cent sales tax to two per cent.

Reporter Finds Prisoners At Tobyhanna Quite Contented

Tobyhanna, March 26—(P)—More than 250 German prisoners of war at the Tobyhanna Military Reservation seem to prefer doing chores around this army installation to facing the Allies in their homeland. A. M. Powell, staff writer of The Eastern Express, said after a tour of the camp.

The prisoners appeared to be cheerful, contented and healthy and greeted newspapermen and photographers with broad smiles and grins. Powell said. Officers said they were good workers and no disciplinary measures had been necessary.

The Germans have been busy cutting ice on several lakes near the reservation. The army is paid the prevailing wage by four ice

Rhine's Pushover for Allies

Following up the Remagen bridgehead with Rhine crossings by the U. S. Third Army at Oppenheim, the British Second Army at Wesel, and the U. S. Ninth north of the Ruhr, the Allies are going to town across the Rhine in a big way. Above map shows these crossings. Canadian First Army assisted in Ruhr action.

AP Man Brings Back Spine-Tingling Story of Escape

By ROBERT C. WILSON

Paris, March 26—(P)—Twenty-nine parachute troops hurled themselves from the C-47 troop carrier on which I was a passenger at 10:16 a. m. Saturday—just three minutes after we crossed the smoke-masked Rhine at an altitude of 600 feet.

Suddenly the huge plane shuddered. A wing spurted flames. There was a sickening thud as Nazi flak ripped into the ship. A few minutes later I was crawling out of my parachute in a plover German field six miles east of the river.

Things had happened fast—it seemed only a matter of seconds as the crewmen and I plunged from the burning plane. I was too stunned by the terrific jar I got when I landed to recall much detail. Moreover, I was too occupied with getting out of the paths of swarms of British gliders that were swooping into the field.

One of the ships struck power lines, careened past me and crashed with a big burst of flames. Another headed straight for me, skidded inches over my head and then nosed into the earth 20 feet away.

I thought everyone was killed as the big ship plowed into the ground, but within five minutes a half-dozen Tommies spilled out and looked cautiously around. One pointed a gun at me.

I waved a white handkerchief frantically, shouting: "I'm an American. Don't shoot."

Hearings On Controversial Bills Planned

Harrisburg, March 26—(P)—Public hearings on controversial bills push to the front this week as phases of Governor Martin's pollution control program inch forward in the legislature.

There will be hearings on two issues—prohibiting racial and religious discrimination in employment and permitting motor boats on Pymatuning lake in western Pennsylvania.

On Wednesday, proponents of legislation to reduce license fees of oleomargarine dealers will have their say. Farm groups will present their opposing views next week.

Action also is promised this week on an administration bill to help municipalities set up self-supporting authorities to construct and operate sewage treatment plants after the war.

Definite developments also expected during the week on legislation to increase workmen's and unemployment compensation benefits. Labor and industry representatives for several weeks have been trying to agree on a joint

Marine Hero Of South Pacific Dies

Washington, March 26—(P)—Major General William H. Rupertus, 55, commander of the U. S. Marine Corps schools at Quantico, Va., who led the First Marine Division in the South Pacific, died last night.

Death was due to a heart attack while he and his wife and five-year-old son were visiting Col. R. C. Kilmartin, commanding officer of the Marine barracks at the navy yard.

His last assignment in the Pacific war theater was commander of the marines in the invasion of Peleliu in the Palau Islands.

A native of Washington, General Rupertus had served in the marines since 1913, when he was commissioned a second lieutenant. Advanced to the rank of Brigadier General when the invasion of the Solomon Islands began in August, 1942, he personally led the marines who captured Tulagi, Gavutu and Florida Islands in that group after bitter fighting

LANDINGS IN RYUKYU CHAIN ARE REPORTED

American Troops, Backed By Bombardment and Task Force Invading Okinawa Group

MENACES SUPPLY LINES

By ELMONT WAITE

Guam, March 26—(P)—American troops, supported by intensive bombardment from a large carrier-battle ship task force, are "attempting landings on the Okinawa group in the Ryukyu chain, only 325 miles south of Kyushu in the Japanese homeland, Domei News Agency reported without confirmation today.

Aerial bombardment of several of the Ryukyu islands, including Okinawa itself, and of air bases in all of the southern Japanese home islands of Kyushu, Shikoku and Honshu, preceded the reported landings.

Tokyo said Okinawa itself was bombed three times Saturday by U. S. battleships—presumably some of the biggest, newest 16-inch battlewagons in Adm. Raymond A. Spruance's Fifth Fleet. Fleet Adm. Chester W. Nimitz has announced only that Nimitz Daito, 270 miles east of Okinawa, was shelled.

The enemy broadcast, made in English and recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, reported the landings were attempted on Toka Shima and Aka Jima, small islands west of the southwestern tip of Okinawa.

Okinawa, most important in the Ryukyu chain and an ideal base for strikes at either Japan or the China coast, probably would be the chief objective in any amphibious operation in the central Ryukyus.

Okinawa has several airfields and good harbors suitable for anchorage of large warships. Tokyo said a powerful U. S. task force of "15 standard and converted carriers, 11 battleships, 10 cruisers, 32 destroyers as well as innumerable auxiliary vessels" was lying southwest of Okinawa to support and protect the landing troops.

Tokyo's statement that 15 carriers were included in the great naval force off Okinawa contradicted its own earlier claim of (Turn to Page Nine)

Perkins May Take Hand In Mine Dispute

Washington, March 26—(P)—Secretary of Labor Perkins is expected to try to stave off a possible nationwide soft coal strike by appealing this week for a 30-day counter-extension.

The current wage agreement expires Saturday night, and negotiations between John L. Lewis's United Mine Workers and bituminous operators, which began March 1, have stalled.

Lewis's demand for a 10-cent-a-ton royalty is said by the operators to be a big obstacle. Adding to the tense situation building up as the contract's expiration date approaches, is a strike vote among the 400,000 bituminous miners scheduled for Wednesday. Few would predict that the miners would vote in the negative while Lewis is negotiating a new contract for the national S. Smith, head of the National Labor Board Relations Board's field division, said the (Turn to Page Nine)

Broad Probe Launched In Food Shortage

Washington, March 26—(P)—Senators asked today why Great Britain does not get more meat from Canada and less from the United States as they began a broad investigation into the nation's food situation.

Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.) told the agriculture committee he understood the Canadians had ample meat and recommended an inquiry into why more of it is not used for lend-lease.

Saying he agreed that it was a point that should be investigated, Senator Shipstead (R-Minn.) said his information was that butter was rationed in Canada.

"Why can't they send it to Great Britain?" asked Senator Ellender (D-La.).

"The British have to pay for it if they get it from Canada," Shipstead replied.

(Government agencies announced recently that lend-lease meat shipments to Britain are being drastically cut for this quarter.)

As the committee began its hearings, Chairman Thomas (D-Okla.) announced that one aim will be to "uncover and destroy" black markets.

Dramatic Picture To Be War Loan Symbol

Washington, March 26—(P)—As the official symbol of the Seventh War Loan, The Associated Press photograph of the Mount Suribachi flag raising is due for the greatest display of any picture in history.

In announcing this, treasury officials said the dramatic pictorial record of the marines' achievement on Iwo Jima will be presented constantly in various forms before "millions of Americans in every community."

Taken by AP photographer Joe Rosenthal while on assignment with the still picture pool, the photo has been copied in oil to give it color. A smaller, simplified version will be used in smaller displays.

Graduate Of Warren High Dies In Action

Mr. and Mrs. Otto Peterson, 8 Sixth avenue, have been advised by the War Department that their only son, T/S Fred W. Peterson, was killed in action in Germany on March 4.

Graduate of the local high school in 1941, young Peterson played trombone in the high school Dragon Band and, later, appeared with Wilson Brydson's swing band. He was a member of First Presbyterian church and some years ago was a member of the Warren Chapter, Order of DeMolay. He was employed by the National Forge and Ordnance Company at Irvine until he volunteered for the aviation cadets.

Entering service two years ago in the first of February, he was transferred from aviation to the engineers and at Fresno, Calif., took the examinations for the Army Specialized Training Program. He served at Camp McChord at Tacoma, Wash., when that field was being opened and then entered University of Idaho with the ASTP. After that he attended University of Oregon, completing his course and graduating there on March 4, 1944. When the ASTP program was dropped, he was transferred to Camp Cooke, Calif., and became a part of the 11th Armored Division.

He went overseas with that unit in September, 1944, going to England until the middle of December, when the 11th was sent in to action on the "bulge" offensive, going through France, Belgium and Luxembourg. It is believed he was killed at or near Trier.

Surviving him, besides his parents, is an uncle, Fred Dinsmoor, also of this city.

OPPOSE STRIKE VOTE

Pittsburgh, March 26—(P)—Twenty-six officials of CIO and AFL local unions here have signed a statement asking members of the United Mine Workers to vote "no" next Wednesday in their national NLRB strike ballot.

The statement said, "It is the duty of every patriotic American to prevent anything which will delay the total destruction of Hitlerism . . . a strike in the coal industry will close down the mills producing war materials. It would give aid to Hitler and his barbarians."

BOY FATALLY SHOT

Creekside, March 26—(P)—Thirteen bullets were fired harmlessly at bottles in the creek by Ronald Snyder, 10, and five other boys. Then the youngsters started home. Michael Wislosky, 13, carrying the gun—a .22 rifle—stumbled over a log and the gun went off, firing the last and 14th bullet. It struck Ronald in the neck, killing him.

Nagoya Factories Wrecked By Raid

By ELMONT WAITE

Twenty-first Bomber Command Headquarters, Monday, March 26—(P)—Five of Japan's big war industries plants in Nagoya were left wrecked by Sunday's B-29 demolition raid, bomber command headquarters announced today.

Headquarters also disclosed that "first adequate photo coverage" of the March 12 and 19 mass incendiary raids of the big Marianas-based bombers showed five square miles of the heart of the city in ruins.

The plants destroyed or damaged were Nagoya Arsenal, the Mitsubishi Aircraft Engine plant and the Asahi Pottery Works, Kurena Textile Plant and Mitsubishi Electrical Company, all producing articles of war.

The Aichi Aircraft Engine Plant and the Nagoya Arsenal, as well as barracks and other buildings in the vicinity of the supposedly empty Nagoya Arsenal, as well as barracks and other buildings in the vicinity of the supposedly empty Nagoya castle, were shown to have been damaged in the March 12 and 19 raids.

ENEMY SHIFTS FORCES FROM ITALY AND WEST FRONT TO DEFEND ATTACK ON VIENNA

Two Russian Armies Already Overrun Four-Fifths of Hungary With Spearheads Aimed at Austrian Border But 36 Miles Away

BERLIN REPORTS "ALL-OUT OFFENSIVE" MOVE

By the Associated Press

London, March 26—A fourth Russian offensive has been launched toward Germany's southern mountain redoubt, Berlin announced today, and Moscow dispatches said the enemy had shifted divisions from Italy and the sagging western front to defend Vienna against a not distant attack.

Two Russian armies already had overrun four-fifths of Hungary below the Danube and their spearhead was within 36 miles of the Austrian border and 77 miles southeast of Vienna.

Berlin broadcasts said a new assault had been sprung north of the Danube in Slovakia, while Marshal Ivan Konev's First Ukrainian Army group continued to grind through the Moravian mountains north of Vienna.

The newest attack, described in Berlin as an "all-out offensive," was started on the lower reaches of the Hron river in Slovakia at 4 a. m. yesterday, a German broadcast said, and a bridgehead over the Hron was gained at Leva, 50 miles northwest of Budapest and 37 miles northeast of Komarom, the Danube river key to Bratislava.

Marshal Fedor Tolbukhin's Third Ukrainian Army and Marshal Rodion Malinovsky's Second Ukrainian army, pushing up the Danube on the south side of that gateway, had left the Vertes mountains and Bakony forest behind them, and were rapidly outflanking Komarom.

Severely mauled, the Germans fell back into a well-fortified triangle formed by the cities of Győr (Raab), Sopron (Odunburg) and Szombathely (Steinamanger), the last big cities of western Hungary.

This area is crisscrossed by the already swollen Marcal, Raba, Csorna and Güns rivers, however, and Moscow dispatches said all signs pointed to the most stubborn opposition despite German losses of 1,000 tanks and 83,000 prisoners in the last few days. Vienna probably will be defended as stoutly as Berlin, Moscow said.

In this area between Lake Balaton and Lake Ueudisler, just inside Austria, the Russians were battering ahead only six miles south of Komarom, 20 miles northeast of Győr.

They were fighting further west, about 15 miles from Győr. To the southwest they were four miles outside Papa, 25 miles south of Győr and 40 miles east of Szombathely.

Deepest Gloom Pervades Reich

London, March 26—(P)—Gen. Eisenhower's great Rhine offensive has plunged the German people into the deepest gloom, dispatches from neutral European capitals said today, but there seemed general agreement that it still is too early to look for a complete collapse of the German home front.

Advices from Bern said the comparative ease with which the Allied armies swept across the Rhine had started the greatest wave of defeatism and despair yet recorded in Germany.

These dispatches emphasized, however, that even though the German people apparently have lost all hope their fear of the gestapo still is so great that any immediate uprising to oust the Nazis and bring a quick peace seems unlikely.

Similar views were expressed by Christer Jaederling, veteran Swedish newspaper correspondent who has just returned to Stockholm from Berlin.

Churchill almost certainly will appear in the house before its adjournment Thursday for the Easter holiday, and it was felt he would not miss the opportunity to describe the opening phases of what he has called "the big heave."

The prime minister had a close call while standing at the shattered western end of the bridge at Wesel. Guided by Lt. Gen. William H. Simpson, commander of the Ninth army, the prime minister had inspected recently occupied areas and had returned to the west bank when a German shell crashed 50 yards away.

Commons To Hear Churchill Report

London, March 26—(P)—Prime Minister Churchill is expected to give the house of commons an eyewitness account of the new Western Front offensive as he witnessed it yesterday on a visit to the Rhine's east bank.

Churchill almost certainly will appear in the house before its adjournment Thursday for the Easter holiday, and it was felt he would not miss the opportunity to describe the opening phases of what he has called "the big heave."

With most house members out of Washington for an Easter rest, Barkley told a reporter he intends to lay out a long list of "must" legislation today with the observation the senate has some hard work ahead if it wants a spring vacation.

THE STATE POLICE SAY:

Watch the curve. At a moderate speed, little difficulty is experienced in rounding a curve. But trouble usually comes when taking a curve at high speed. A grip may be reached where the grip between your tires and the road breaks. This happens frequently on wet roads and is likely to result in your car skidding. A good driver approaches a curve at slow speed and accelerates slightly as the curve is rounded.

Short Circuit Caused Blaze Early Saturday

Firemen were called to the Donald Smith automobile display rooms on Water street at 3:45 Saturday morning where a short circuit in the wiring had caused a fire in the kitchen of an apartment over the display room. The short had developed in some manner unknown and the heavy cable carrying the wires had become red hot setting fire to the wall over the kitchen sink. The firemen were forced to cut the wires leading into the building and tear out the wall board over the sink leading to the attic where the fire had followed the wires.

Prompt work held down the damage to about $150 most of which was caused by tearing a hole into the wall to reach the fire. It is expected that an inspection today will force the owner of the building to have much rewiring done.

The fire department responded with Engine Companies No. 1 and No. 2 and the aerial ladder truck from which ladders were used to reach the roof.

Alarm System Gradually Put In Use Again

Mechanics of the fire department have been busy every day since the heavy snow storm of last Wednesday night and alarm circuits 1 and 2 have been restored to use. However the circuits on the East Side and South Side are still out due to the wires being in the creek and river. The river will have to drop considerable before the reconstruction of this system can be undertaken.

Never in the history of the fire alarm system has there been such a complete breakdown in the fire alarm system. Not only the weight of the snow and ice tore down the wires but falling limbs and branches from trees ripped down the wires in many places.

Residents of the East Side and South Side are asked to use telephones in reporting a fire until the damage can be repaired.

Youngsville, March 23—The play "Almost Summer", by Christopher Sergel, was presented Thursday evening by the junior class of the Youngsville high school and is being repeated this evening. The play, a three-act comedy with a distinctive high school atmosphere, was given to almost a capacity audience and was received with much appreciation.

On the programs were some clever free-hand drawings of student life, both at school and on vacation. Announcement was made on the program that the play was dedicated to the memory of Thomas E. Olds, class of '44, killed in action in Belgium December 18, 1944.

The play was very well given under the direction of the class sponsors, Miss Mary Handler and Miss Helen Zahner. Betty Pierce was prompter; stage managers were Calvin Abraham and John Donaldson; properties, Ann Sevak, Lois Walter, Alice Samson and Opal Rhoades; advertising, William McMean and Lorraine Bogren; program committee, Joanna Zawacki and Sarah Jane Peterson; business managers, Janet Wingard and Dolores McIntyre.

SURPRISE SNOW STORM

About eight inches of snow fell Wednesday night, and though the snow clinging to the trees and outlining all electric wires appeared beautiful Thursday, it did considerable damage about town, particularly to trees. The weight of the snow broke down some large trees and many branches were on the ground. The creek is high over its banks in some places but doing little, if any damage at this time.

Telephone Service for Farms Explained To Lander Grange

New developments in building telephone lines, which have made it possible to reduce the cost of providing telephone service for farms, were described last evening by C. H. Springer, assistant manager, of the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania, speaking at the Farmington Grange meeting at Lander.

He pointed out that approximately 95 percent of the rural families in the Bell Telephone Company's territory may now be reached by telephone lines without any charge to new customers for public highway construction.

The new developments and reduced charges made telephone installation much cheaper, both for public highway construction in excess of one-half mile, and for private property construction—the latter in cases where the farm house is located some distance from the nearest public road.

The Bell Telephone Company will now build up to 2640 feet of pole line along a public highway to serve a new customer, instead of the previous 1600 feet, Mr. Springer said. Construction charges beyond a half-mile limit have been reduced to $5 for each 100 feet. Previously, they were $5 for each 50 feet.

Mr. Springer also said that in the very few cases where farms are located more than a half-mile from the nearest telephone line, it is often possible for applicants to obtain service without construction charges. He explained that this can be accomplished by averaging the half-mile construction allowance among a group of neighboring farms.

By means of a large exhibit, he illustrated how two farmers, one 3000 feet away from the nearest telephone line and the other 4800 feet away, could both get service without construction charges, because the total distance results in less than a half mile of construction for each farmer.

The speaker described several construction methods employed by the company. One was an improved, heavily insulated wire which can be buried where the soil is suitable. This wire also can be used in some cases on private property where a pole line ordinarily would be needed to reach the house from the nearest public road.

The United States Government as Publisher. The Children's Room Committee of the library is making arrangements for the Pre-school Picture Book and Story Hour, which will be held for the first time on Friday afternoon, April 6th. Reservations must be made in advance because the success of such a group depends partly on the number being small enough to give individual attention.

There will be two separate periods, both of which will be conducted by Mrs. Gerry Archibald. The first will be held in the children's room at 2 o'clock and the second at 2:30. Reservations may be made by telephone or in person at the children's room circulation desk.

"We have all felt the pinch of wartime restrictions," he said. "These restrictions have slowed down our rural development program, but only temporarily."

"Today, about one-third of all the nation's farms have telephone service. A recent study of farm development here in Pennsylvania indicates that 43 percent of the farms have service in the territory of the Bell Telephone Company."

"We have learned a lot about new methods of construction and new materials. Some of the things we have learned are already in use. When the war production program relaxes, it will make possible the manufacture of quantities of telephone equipment for civilian use. As a result, we will find it possible to expand our rural service more rapidly and more readily. This expansion will take place just as quickly as materials and manpower are once again available."

Where a pole line over private property is necessary from the highway to the farmhouse, the farmer can build this himself and the company will string the wire without charge. Or the company will build the pole line at the rate of $12 per pole, which is a reduction from $18 previously charged, it was explained.

Another method discussed is what is known as "long-span" construction. This type of telephone line employs a strong, steel wire which is highly resistant to severe storm conditions, thus assuring a minimum of interruptions to the service due to the weather.

WAR'S GREATEST OPERATION

The most important news of the moment is that the Allied armies which have stormed across the Rhine in the greatest operation of its kind in history are so firmly installed on German soil east of this mighty river that they cannot be thrown back to the west side—they definitely are there to stay and to continue their drive into the Reich.

This doesn't mean there won't be heavy enemy resistance in some areas. The time of major counter-attacks by the Nazis is yet to come and we must expect these, especially in the north between Emmerich and the Ruhr. Here the Germans have their best troops—including their crack First Paratroop Army, which also comprises tanks and infantry—to protect this strategic gateway to the Westphalian plain that flanks the Ruhr and leads to Berlin.

It is the particular ambition of the Allies to force the Hitlerites to stand and fight on that northern flank, which is adapted to tank warfare. If that battle eventually it will be a fight to a finish, our immediate objective being the utter annihilation of this German army.

Nazi Field Marshal Kesselring, who has been brought up from the Italian theatre to supplant Field Marshal von Rundstedt, is no Napoleonic genius but he is a capable and determined fighter. Perhaps more important, he is said to be staunchly loyal to Hitler.

Thus far, however, German resistance on the whole has been weak. Kesselring hasn't anything like sufficient troops to defend that long Rhenish front. He is facing more than 1,250,000 Allied troops, and if he has half that number he is exceedingly lucky. Even if he has, they're far inferior in quality.

One of the most important phases of this titanic Allied offensive is that wild drive straight into the heart of the Reich by the racing armored columns of General Patton, who again is proving his right to the nickname of "Old Blood and Guts". What a man—and what troops!

This sensational thrust by Patton's Third Army may prevent the Nazi forces to the north from ultimately retreating southward into the Bavarian Alps where Hitler has prepared a "fortress" in the Berchtesgaden region for a final stand. Of course it's too soon to predict such a development, but it certainly must be considered as a possibility at this writing.

Should Patton achieve this it would be one of the great coups of the war. Undoubtedly it would shorten the conflict by reducing the number of troops Hitler may be able to collect in this Alpine region. The fuhrer is said to have made great preparations in the way of assembling supplies and building fortifications for this final defense in the mountains.

LENTEN SERMONETTE

REV. HAROLD C. WARREN
First Presbyterian Church

John 10:17—I lay down my life . . . No man taketh it from me.

All down the history of the Christian centuries, the genius that has illumined the pathway of human progress has been the genius of the blazing heart. We need not drey philosophy or science or practical worldly wisdom and material achievement; we know their importance. But we know where they lead if left to themselves. Look around you today, see the spiritual suicide, pessimism, despair in the world. But society has been purified, human life sweetened, human hopes strengthened by those whose hearts have been warmed by the contagion of the living Christ.

He Himself is the supreme example. "I lay down my life," He said. "No man taketh it from me." There is an explanation of His victory amid apparent defeat: No one COULD have taken His life had He resisted. While dreaming of the Kingdom of God in the little town of Nazareth, He might have kept the dreams to Himself, and lived and died the supreme Sybarite, the Epicure of His own emotions. But He deliberately chose to stand forth as the preacher of that kingdom, giving His life for it. He might easily have fallen in line with the rabbis of His day, a brilliant young teacher from Galilee, the favorite of the schools, instead of serving the people. But He deliberately chose to be the friend of publicans and sinners. "The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister and to give his life a ransom for many." He could have evaded the frowning cross, escaping from Jerusalem where His enemies plotted. But He chose to die for their sakes, a prayer for them upon His lips. His death, like His life, was one of unselfish love.

He is the lonely and splendid example of one who was naturally for others more than man; but by choice for Himself, only man. The lame and prostrate were reformed at His touch into strength and vigor, yet He Himself had to rest by a wayside well and ask water to quench His thirst. Although He restored Lazarus of His sisters, He would not escape the cross. "He endured the cross, despising the shame, for the joy that was set before him."

This is the Leader who reaches out His hand to us, as He calls us to travel the way of the cross, to climb the steep ascent of heaven through peril, toil and pain. Pray God, "To us may grace be given, to follow in his train."

T-H-O-U-G-H-T-S

Some therefore cried one thing, and some another: for the assembly was confused; and the more part knew not wherefore they were come together.—The Acts 19:32.

Yet if thou didst know how little wit governs this mighty universe.—Mrs. A. Behn.

Second Marriage

By EVELYN MURRAY CAMPBELL

YESTERDAY: Cynthia's attempts to placate the children and get them to like Carey is pathetic. Edris was the most difficult of all to handle while Vera simply stayed away from the house as much as possible. The office did not take much of her time now and Cynthia did not know what to do with herself.

Chapter 12

IT WAS disconcerting not to be needed. Maud ran the house beautifully and the children were entirely independent with their own concerns, their own plans. She had been the charming visitor who came to dinner every night but she did not know them intimately. Cynthia told herself this with a wry smile but it was the truth and left her at loose ends when she stayed at home.

So why should she? There were other things she could do. For one she bought a flock of gay prints and organzas though it was so late in the season and in spite of the huge bills of the former month. She had spent so much time in street clothes that now she lost her head completely with the help of a saleswoman anxious to thin her stock.

"Madame is so very slender. She can wear the very young frocks. Even a fourteen is a little—we will try a twelve—"

"Heavens, no!" Cynthia gasped. "Fourteen is young enough. The seams can be taken up."

"But it is not the age, only the size that is fourteen," blundered the woman, tactless, and Cynthia murmured, "Oh," deflated.

She had never cared about looking young until now. She hadn't given youth a thought as it slipped away from her and if it had lingered longer than with other women she knew, she had not been unduly elated about it. But now she wanted pretty things and got them, too. The fitting room mirrors were flattering and somebody called her "Miss".

Vera was at home when the boxes came. "Trousseau?" There was a bite in her voice that didn't belong there.

YESTERDAY: Cynthia buys a flock of new gowns and as Vera watches her put them away, she loses all joy in them when Vera remarks, "That was a lousy thing to do, Mother. You're selfish and think of yourself only. Marriage is one's own affair—or should be. But usually it isn't when it interferes with other people's plans." Then make new ones, retorts Cynthia. I'll have to, cries Vera, as she rushes from the room.

Chapter 13

CYNTHIA'S pleasure in her new frocks was spoiled. She hung them away without interest. But she had cause to remember them when Carey opened the closet door and saw the array. From the first time they had been together he had noticed her clothes with quick, keen appreciation for color and form. But now there was something else in his face. She would have called it disapproval if that had not been so preposterous.

"You've been on a buying spree, Cynthia?"

"I had to have something new. We'll be going out a lot. Carey, as soon as my friends learn about us. After all," she laughed a little, "one doesn't get married every day."

"That's true," he said slowly, as if he picked his words. "I'm afraid my own wardrobe doesn't stack up with this, Cynthia."

"Then, order a new one." She spoke lightly but it dawned upon her that Carey didn't seem to have much variety of any sort. His bags had only bare essentials—an outfit that was well enough at a summer camp wasn't quite the thing now.

He looked at her. "I won't need a new one." The work I do doesn't call for dressing up and I wouldn't have the time if I wanted to wear them. What did this stuff cost?"

She was so taken aback that she could not answer for a moment. He was questioning her just as Vera had done but for another reason.

"Why ask me that?"

"Because I want to pay for them, of course."

She burst out laughing. "Pay

Cynthia said, "One would have thought you were buying your own last month."

Slow color came into Vera's lovely ivory skin that no sea or sun could spoil and Cynthia was instantly remorseful. They had never quarreled or had mother-daughter enmity between them.

"I shouldn't have said that. I hope you'll show me your pretty things after you've looked at mine."

"Yes, it was," Vera shrugged. "You heard, but I'll say it again. A messy trick, then. It made us all feel silly before people. One's own mother running off, getting married to somebody we didn't know."

Cynthia trembled. Suddenly she was "having it out" with Vera who more than the others had seemed to take the debacle with composure. Vera was now taking her to task.

"It was a selfish thing to do. But you've always been selfish." Cynthia waited a moment before she said, "Why selfish? It's not as if I interfered with yours in any way. Or with the others." She ignored the "always."

It was too ridiculous. Faint derision touched Vera's lips. "Don't you think so? You're our mother. What do you do affects us more or less."

"And how did my marriage affect you? Cynthia kept herself under control. This was only Vera, her child, but she had to know how she felt. Vera, the closed, the guarded. There might be something she could meet and conquer.

"Well—we had always looked up to you, you know, as if you were mother—and father, too. One person. Wise, you know, in every way. We thought you knew for my clothes? I'd feel funny if you tried to do that. This is my 'trousseau,' as Vera called it. I've paid for my own clothes so long that I'd feel almost indecent if I let a man—even you—do it for me."

She went to him and put her arms around him as if he had been Peter. "Don't let's ever allow money to come into it," she begged. "No love can withstand that. I'm sorry I bought these things—I'll send them back to you."

But you can't forget when you want to and it's the trivial things that stay in the subconscious. Cynthia never looked at her new frocks without feeling sick but she didn't send them back. One had to have clothes.

THE house had taken on an empty feeling. Only Cynthia's own room when Carey was there, had the atmosphere of living happiness. The big radio downstairs no longer reported baseball games or the dreary dramas relished by Aunt Maud. Children did not come and go and the ice box door hardly ever slammed.

Invitations arrived. Cynthia had had a social life among the wealthy, complacent, settled people of the town and now these, whether from duty or curiosity, included Carey when they sent bids for dinner. But Carey rebuffed.

"Dinner? Good Lord, don't ask me to go through one of those things. Your banker? His got your money, why should he want us with it?"

It was only fun, of course. He couldn't mean it.

"I've gone to your Brandons," she said. "Beer and sandwiches!"

It was spiteful and she hadn't wanted it to sound like that. Why did the wrong thing always come uppermost when they argued? But he didn't notice it.

"Brandy and I are in the same game. We've got things to talk about. Not masie shots or money."

When she didn't smile he stopped smiling, too. "Cynthia, I can't do it. I've told you that before. Dressed up dinner. I mean, I'm too dead tired when my stretch is over and I've got to build up for the next one." He

all the answers and that we could always count on you. And then you do this—come home with a handkerchief tied over your head, bringing in this man we'd never even heard of—this young man—"

Cynthia was scarlet. She held up her hand. "Leave Carey out of it," she said.

"Carey can't be left out. He's the root of it. But I'm not blaming him. Lots of men would have done the same thing. Pretty soft for Carey."

"You are vulgar," Cynthia said coldly. It was horrible and hateful beyond words. She didn't have to listen but she did. And a hateful little piping voice within her kept saying over and over that it wasn't vulgar at all. It was only cold facts told in a cold fashion and what other people, strangers who didn't know, would say. "All right, go on," she said. "But first I want to admit that I was wrong, not in marrying Carey but because I didn't tell you in time for you to get used to the idea. To use your common sense. It was only because it seemed so very much our own affair."

Vera nodded in calm agreement. "Marriage is one's own affair—or should be. But usually it isn't. When it interferes so frightfully with other people's plans—"

Cynthia laughed and this relieved the tension. The absurdity of the grave girl using psychology like that!

"Oh, did you have plans?" She picked up the fallen frock.

Vera did not reply. Her silence was ominous. She moved to the dressing table and began to brush her silky hair. She was ivory pale again and the situation was not completed as Cynthia had hoped.

"Hasn't everyone—even the children. But now everything is knocked into a cocked hat."

"I'm sorry," Cynthia said, cool again. She had had enough. She tried to speak lightly, dismissing the whole thing. "Can't you make some new plans? Something to fit in with my own?"

"I'll have to, it seems," Vera said, and went out of the room taking the brush with her.

gave her one of the looks that belonged between them. "All I want is you, Cynthia, when I come back to you."

So she called Myra Conway and explained that Carey's work at the plant was so arduous that—Myra responded with one of her gibes. "So you really did marry a working man—"

"Don't we all work?" Cynthia was bland.

THERE was one party though that couldn't be refused. Ned Almon gave it at the Miramar on a dance night. Ned and Cynthia had gone to these dinner dances together, season after season, meeting the same people and sometimes delightful new ones.

Carey capitulated. "All right, if someone's feelings must be saved." He had had more Ned at a glance and was gloriously not jealous—too much so. His white teeth gleamed in his dark young face and for a moment he was as he had been on the trip across country. "I'll scrub for the occasion."

But there was no occasion as it turned out. His return from the plant was always uncertain—it might be four or six and this was one of the late times. Cynthia dressed very early in one of the new frocks but at a quarter of seven there was no sign of the battered black car. Of course it was a long way to Burbank—the traffic might be heavy. A dozen things might have happened. . . . Only one had.

The belated telephone told her. "I couldn't make it, my girl. Something came up that can't be ditched. Brandy and I are up to the neck—"

"Where are you now?"

"At Brandy's house." Innocent surprise. "Joan picked us up some supper. I say, Cynthia, can't you run over there yourself or let Almon know? It's not important. Just a party—"

She couldn't say anything. Her throat felt as if the pearl necklace was strangling her.

Carey hung up blithely. "If I did myself," she said aloud. "If I did myself," she said aloud. "Nobody is to blame—not even Carey."

Relatives Return From Wedding In Boston Cathedral

Mrs. Ralph Dey, of North Warren, Mr. and Mrs. John Laufenburger and Mrs. Edna Laufenburger, of Olean, N. Y., have returned from Boston, Mass., where they attended the wedding of their sister, Edna Laufenburger, formerly of North Warren but now of Brooklyn, N. Y., to Dr. Peter Perris, also of Brooklyn.

The ceremony took place on March 18 at 3 p. m. in the Evangelical Cathedral in Boston. The vows were taken before an altar flanked by snapdragons, stock and lilies. The bride's gown was of white satin with lace bertha and long train and she held a fingertip veil held in place with a cluster of sea pearls. Her bouquet was of calla lilies. Her matron of honor was her sister, Mrs. Anderson, who wore yellow satin with aqua accessories and a blue and yellow tulle of flowers. She carried narcissi and blue iris. Bridesmaids were Ruth Perris, sister of the bridegroom, and a school chum, both with the Marine Corps Women's Reserve and on furlough from San Diego, Calif. They wore Alice blue gowns with matching veils and carried bouquets of Talisman roses. The bridegroom's mother wore purple satin with a shoulder corsage of orchids. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, John Laufenburger, and Master George Patrick, cousin of the bridegroom, acted as ring bearer. John Boris and John Kelkas were groomsmen.

Following the wedding, a reception for 200 guests was held at the Hotel Gardner, with dancing following the dinner.

After a short honeymoon, the couple will return to Brooklyn, where Dr. Perris will resume his duties at Unity Memorial Hospital. The bride is a graduate of Warren High School, class of 1938, and of W. C. A. Hospital in Jamestown. Dr. Perris, graduate of English High School and Middlesex University in Boston, served his internship at Unity Hospital and since his graduation has been retained on the staff.

Master Points to Be Given Bridge Tourney Winners

The second annual tournament of the Jamestown Contract Bridge Club will be held at Hotel Jamestown April 7, according to Mrs. Herbert Olson, president. At this tournament, sponsored by the American Contract Bridge League, the 1945 open pair contract championship of Chautauque county will be decided. Winners last year were Mrs. Sam Lundquist and Mrs. Leon Witte, of Jamestown, and runners-up were Miss Charlotte Sidway and W. Howard Woolworth, of Buffalo.

The Jamestown tournament committee, fully aware of the difficulties of transportation, have decided to hold only one complete game. Play will start promptly at 1:45 p. m. Players later must accept their decisions.

Entries for the open pair championship will close at 1 p. m. the same day. This game will be played in two sessions, afternoon and evening, and any pair of players, men, women or mixed, is eligible. However, all desiring to take part and compete for the championship honor must enter for both sessions. There will be a consolation game in the evening for those eliminated in the afternoon. Visiting players will be guests at an informal reception following the tourney.

Rules and entries will be governed by the ACBL regulations for duplicate play and master points will be awarded the winners and runners-up in conformance with ACBL rules. Manner of scoring will be announced from the floor by the tournament director, Mrs. Conrad Nelson.

Allen Gibson, of Warren, is a member of the tourney ways and means committee and Dr. R. H. Israel is on the laws committee.

IRVINE

Irvine, March 21—Harry Johnson is still doctoring his knee but seems to be getting lots better.

Mr. and Mrs. George Eberts of Oil City and Mrs. Martha Albaugh of Pittsburgh were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Johnson over the weekend.

Mrs. Evelyn Westfall who has been spending some time with Mrs. Inez Westfall returned to her home on Cobham Hill.

Sixteen members of the Ladies Union of the Irvine Presbyterian church and three guests had the pleasure of enjoying the hospitality of Mrs. N. B. Huling, on Thursday evening, March 15th.

Those present from out of town were Mrs. Anna Kahle of Warren and Mrs. Elton McKinney of Erie a former member.

Mrs. Ernest Crull presided and during the devotional period read part of the 24th chapter of St. Luke, which pertains to Christ's resurrection and ascension. Readings were appropriate to spring and the Lenten season and included poems "Song of Spring" and "Legend of the Dogwood."

During a brief business session members voted to give ten dollars to the Red Cross War Fund. A "White Elephant" sale, with Mrs. Roy Lightner as saleslady, was one of the features of the social hour and netted $11.50. This together with the free-will offering made the total receipts of the evening $18.85 which was very gratifying. Games and a St. Patrick quiz followed.

The St. Patrick color was carried out in table appointments and the very tasty refreshments served by the hostess, near the close of a most pleasant evening. Mrs. John Kotod will be the hostess on April 19th.

Warren Independents Cop Invitational Tourney Title

Running Romance

Gunder Hagg hasn't been able to consistently hit top form during his current American tour, but the swift Swede wins this one. Holder of multiple distance records is expected to wed Dorothy Nortier, of Piedmont, Calif. Couple renewed courtship in Chicago.

Brilliant Last Half Stand Enables Locals to Cop 35-31 Decision Over Bradford

Forced to expend every bit of strength they had, the Warren Independents managed to edge the Bradford YMCA night on the local YM court, 35-31, and collect the second annual Invitational Tournament championship. The Independents, all high school boys who will return to the Dragon scholastic squad next year, put on a blast of power in the final two stanzas to overcome a 17-14 half-time deficit and emerge the winner by a four-point margin.

Following the game, Captain Alan Babcock, 6'3" Indies guard, was presented with the tournament trophy. The trophy is a statue of a basketball player, with arm outstretched and holding a basketball, mounted on an oak base. The trophy will be presented to the boys' coach, Joseph Massa.

The local cagers failed to find themselves in the first two quarters, while in the meantime, Ray Colosimo was pacing the Bradfordites to a slight margin. Bradford held almost complete control in the first period, managing to keep the Warren height advantage from interfering with their attempted victory march. During the first three minutes the lead saw-sawed back and forth, but the out-of-towners succeeded in gaining and holding a three-point margin to end the first quarter, 12-9.

The ex-Dragons started to manipulate a little more skillfully in the second stanza, their zone defense protecting them from any Bradford scoring spree. Both teams connected for five markers in this quarter. The half time whistle sounded with the Bradford Y crew maintaining their slight lead, 17-14.

With the towering giants Eaton, Babcock, and Reed gaining the bankboard and rebound control and Eaton, Babcock, and Gray setting the scoring pace, the Independents marched back in the third period to outpoint their opponents, 12-8, and move ahead for the first time since the opening canto. Bradford forced the locals to the limit, but the boys managed to keep their lead when the period ended.

Jack Eaton was the locals' top scorer, collecting 9, while Babcock and Gray accounted for 8 and 7, respectively. Ray Reed did a brilliant ball-hawking job, which was instrumental in keeping the Warren aggregation in the ballgame.

Going into the final stanza with a meager one-point margin, the locals put out every bit of knowledge they had. The lead changed hands frequently before the Indies could establish somewhat strong margin late in the period.

With a matter of minutes remaining, Warren secured a five-point lead through their excellent board shots. Eaton and Babcock together put in 7 baskets on rebounds. Bradford concluded their scoring with a foul shot and the final whistle sounded with the Independents on the long end of the 35-31 count.

In the preliminary, an all-star quint replaced the Kane Independents, somewhere unable to be here. Struthers succeeded in walling the pick-up crew, 64-49, with Ted Kaminsky and Dick Finley pacing the Wellsmen and Gail Nelson leading the losers.

Does Al Wolfe Rate as the Best Cager W.H.S. Ever Had? Changes Make Explanation

PRO
By Fritz Kennett
Sports Editor:

Couldst I but have one more word with you pertaining to the best basketball player who ever wore the Blue and White of Warren—and avoid this hedging the issue? You struck below the belt twice in your last answer which has just come to hand. First off you had the audacity to call a New York Stater and secondly to bring in some cracks about automobiles. I handed you the glue pot once before but you still refuse to stick to the issue at hand, namely: "Al Wolfe was the best basketball player that ever represented Warren."

First things first. I still consider myself a Keystoner, whether your opinion has been slated for N. Y. State or not. My best years of play were all spent in Pa., and I still think my best friends are located in the town of Warren. I do hope you got that straight. Secondly, about that 1922 or 1942 Red Cross blood bank would they recognize it, or would they pass it by and take the good old plasma from the 1922 year? Don't lead with your chin, age is an essential at times.

To date you have said or done nothing to refute my statement about Wolfe's capabilities on the court. Players may come and go at Warren High, but until I am reliably informed, I will be out there staunch in my stand for the Big Bad Wolfe. I you will look back over the records you will find that he made the varsity in his first year out and then played two more years. In all those three years he was a standout performer, never dogging it and always being up there with the top scorers and usually leading them—even when he was playing under the handicap of a taped up back as the result of a sprain which he received in one of his all-out efforts. That I think finishes me up. If you refuse to take my word as to his capabilities, then on your next trip around the loop, converse with some of the coaches who have not aged too much and still remain at their tasks. If you can't locate any of them it will probably be that they died happy to think they would not have to face such a performer in years to come. Thanks.

CON
By Richard Harris

Sticking to the issue, "Al Wolfe was the best basketball player that ever represented Warren," is of utmost importance to my competitor. My answer to the "gluepot query" comes in the form of age, as does Sportman Kennett's referred to the quality of wine, recognition of a painting, or the blood donor. (By the way, I believe there is a law which states that donors must be eighteen years of age or older, which does not include myself, Mr. Kennett.) There is each month at the Library Theatre a short called "Time Marches On," which stands as the basis for my reply to the standing question. If my readers and my competitor will take time to read Ray Peebles' "Sideline Gossip" in the March 21 edition of the Erie Dispatch-Herald, you will see another of the many modern writers' views on the changes which have come about in the coge sport during the passing years. Quote, "If you want to obtain a full realization of the changes that have come about in basketball during the past few years, just try your hand at officiating. This corner (Ray Peebles) did it the other night and is still trying to find out what was going on out there on the floor. As I was making my way slowly but steadily down the sideline after calling a foul on one of the members of the coaches' team, Red Cochran shouted from the bench: 'Hey, Ray, that's the way it used to be. Things have changed!' They certainly have."

Now, belittling Al Wolfe is not my purpose, but all I wish to do is to point into some people's minds the fact that the changes which have been made in the game during the last twenty years have changed the complexion of almost every phase of it. Trivial are matters such as (1) A team still consists of five men; or (2) Scoring is the main thing in the game.

I'll venture to say that no 1923-4-5 team ever met what is properly labeled a zone defense. No doubt Mr. Kennett has seen the Red Cross blood bank would they recognize it, or would they pass it by and take the good old plasma from the 1922 year? Don't lead with your chin, age is an essential at times.

I'll also venture to say that the over-six-foot class did not prevail in the sport in the early '20s as it does today, which also demands a bit of reasoning. My argument has ventured from the original question, but it points out that there were a lot of factors in the game during 1924 which Wolfe did not face and which the players of the modern ages are meeting.

Just what could Wolfe and his exceptional shooting ability have done against some of the barriers which dominate the sport today? That is the Number One question. If course, Wolfe was a good shot and an excellent player, but the game has CHANGED.

HAM 'N RYE
Wilmington, Del., March 26—(P)—Phillies Manager Fred Fitzsimmons finally found a way to distinguish between Granville and Garvin Hammer, ball-playing brothers, whose similar names and similar appearances confuse one and all in the Phillies' camp.

He asked each Hammer, "What do they call you?"—and each replied: "Ham."
Fitz threw up his hands.
"Guess we'll have to call you two ham 'n rye," he grumbled.

Struthers Nips Forge to Even Girls' Series

In one of the most bitterly contested games of the entire league play, Struthers Wells' feminine cagers edged out a 26-25 victory over the National Forge sextet Friday night on the YWCA hardwood to even up the three-game playoff series, the winner to be decided Tuesday night when the two teams battle it out to decide the Girls' City League champ.

Moll was the main instrument in the Struthers win, accounting for 20 points, while Horner paced the Forgers with 13.

Struthers ran up an early lead and at the first period mark held a 12-8 margin. The National Forge aggregation cut the lead to just two points in the second canto, and at the intermission, Struthers was leading by a 19-17 count.

The third quarter saw-sawed back and forth, with both teams collecting 3 points apiece, as Struthers managed to hold their slight lead at the end of the third stanza, 22-20. The Forgers outpointed the Wells crew in the final go, 5-4, but couldn't get the necessary markers to put them in the lead, and Struthers emerged with a 26-25 win.

Rowland and Hathaway followed Moll's 20 points with 5 and 1, respectively, for Struthers, and Sheffer and Spencer countered 7 and 5, respectively, for the Irvineites.

In the preliminary, Sylvania I swamped its alster aggregation, Sylvania II, 24-9, with Lindquist, Seymour, and Washburn putting in 12, 10, and 2, respectively, for the winners, and Covell, Gillette, and Chiodo accounting for 4, 2, 2, and 1, respectively, for the losers. Struthers and Forge will meet at 8:30 on Tuesday on the YW court to decide the final winner. In the 7:30 prelim, Thomas Coupling will engage Sylvania I.

Donora Quint Beaten, 40-38, By Allentown

By TOM SHRIVER

Philadelphia, March 26—(AP)—In one of the wildest finishes in scholastic basketball annals, Allentown High Saturday night won the state PIAA championship from a game Donora team, 40-38.

With one second left to play, a foul was called against Allentown. The gun barked and Referee Jocko Collins signalled the Class A title game was ended.

Donora protested, saying it was entitled to the foul try.

Officials and rival coaches conferred with the timekeeper.

It was finally decided that Donora should be given the opportunity to try for a foul shot or take the ball out of bounds in the last second of play.

The Canaries returned. Donora made one pass from the sidelines and the game ended.

The victory gave the Canaries

Planes Hunt Under-ground Objectives

By HENRY B. JAMESON

Last night Mosquitos attacked Berlin for the 34th consecutive night and American night-proving planes joined in hammering German targets. The night attacks followed yesterday's pulverizing of German strongpoints and reinforcement centers in front of Field Marshal Montgomery's drive into the Ruhr by thousands of Allied planes.

The kickoff of the campaign against hidden underground objectives was made yesterday by a force of 250 British-based Liberators which attacked three buried oil storage dumps between Hamburg and Brunswick.

Altogether 6,000 sorties were flown yesterday, with the Liberators reporting good results against the underground oil targets at Eimhen, Buchen and Hitzacker and with 800 RAF heavy planes smashing at freight yards at Hannover, Osnabrueck and Munster.

Approximately 6,000 German vehicles of all types from tanks to wagons were destroyed by the Tactical Air Forces over Rhine bridgeheads.

The German air force put up little when taken resistance.

In Italy, Lt. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, chief of the Mediterranean Allied air force, declared the "Luftwaffe is virtually grounded."

The Mediterranean Allied air force, carrying out 2,500 sorties yesterday, set a new low in losses.

Landings in Ryukyu Chain Are Reported

having sunk several flatboats in Vice Adm. Marc A. Mitscher's raids all last week against southern Honshu, Kyushu, Shikoku and the Ryukyus. Tokyo had reported 15 carriers originally in Mitscher's force before it claimed any sinkings.

Capture of Okinawa would give the United States control of the East China sea and would provide airfields to strike at the Japanese Homeland, Formosa and China with heavy bombers by even the smallest U. S. bombers and bomb-carrying fighter planes.

Control of the East China sea would be possibly the war's greatest single step toward cutting Japan's lines of sea communication with the Netherlands East Indies and other stolen territory to the southwest which produce war-vital rubber, oil and other supplies.

The hollow heart of Germany was exposed. The staggered enemy army, deprived of more than 300,000 effective in the west alone since the start of this month, had neither the force nor the mobility to recover from the multiple blows Eisenhower was raining in increasing numbers and strength.

Final victory was in the air in the songs of infantrymen riding

Ration Board Issues Message To All Truckers

The local war price and rationing board issues the following emergency statement to truck owners of the section:

We are compelled to warn you, or at least about half of you, that you will not have your second quarter rations early in April. We sent your applications out the first week in March. We wanted them made out and returned to us promptly. We said as much several times in the newspaper and on the air.

Everything was arranged to give you the best service. Apparently it is difficult to anticipate in March how badly you will need gasoline in April.

When you come up to our office this week and explain to Mrs. Hedrick how much you need transport rations in your business, remember the application you could have mailed to us three weeks ago, thereby saving the gasoline you have used in your car driving to this office. Please accept our assurances we will tell you just how quickly we can mail you your second quarter T coupons and will mean it when we say we are sorry we could not send it sooner. Applications received by Tuesday, will be mailed right out.

Wheat Train Wrecked Near Tambine Road

Sixteen freight cars loaded with wheat from the grain boats in Erie harbor on their way east were piled up Saturday near the Tambine road leading off Route 119. None of the crew were reported injured and the wrecking crew from Warren was summoned.

Just what caused the derailment is not known and the first 14 cars of the number derailed piled high in a space of about 250 feet. Some of the cars were thrown almost on to the highway nearby and the rail line was effectively plugged up. Cars were overturned, upended and smashed while grain was strewn over a long distance. Some 200 feet of the track was torn out.

Rail traffic during the tie-up which existed until early Sunday morning was rerouted up the river to Olean and through to Emporium. A bus was run from Emporium through to Warren Saturday evening carrying passengers and mail.

No Overtime On Front Lines Soldier Writes

A recent letter home from Pfc. Robert J. List of Grand Valley should open the eyes of persons who won't work because he doesn't like his wages. The soldier, writing from his base just behind the front lines on the western front, says:

"We hear a lot about the people in America who don't want to work in the middle of the week because it isn't double time, but they will work on Sundays to get double time. They should stop and look at the fellows on the front lines who can't stop fighting when they want to just because they aren't getting paid double time. They are fighting day after day for the same price every month. They are doing this for you and also for themselves in time to come, that we will have a peaceful and happy life."

"So let's not think about the money. Let's think about the fellows on the front lines. Just say to yourselves, 'The more work I do the more it will help the front-line fellows and the sooner the war will be over.'"

Pvt. List is an ambulance driver in a medical collecting company and, no doubt it was his seeing wounded and mutilated men that inspired him to make the above plea to fellow Americans.

His letter contains high praise for the men of the front lines. "The fighting men are going through a hard struggling battle and are doing a wonderful job. They are men to be proud of," wrote Pfc. List. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy List of Grand Valley.

EMMA KIESTER MILLER

(Special to Times-Mirror)
Mrs. Emma Kiester Miller, daughter of Lewis and Mary Jane Kiester, was born at East Hickory, July 18, 1862, and died March 12, 1945. She was a life-long resident of East Hickory and taught several years in the public schools of Forest county.

In 1886 she was married to James T. Miller of Renfrew, Ontario, Canada, who preceded her in death September 30, 1944. In 1926 they celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. The large number of old friends present attested to the love and esteem in which they were both held.

Mrs. Miller was the last surviving charter member of the Ladies Aid and active in its work up to within a few weeks of her death. She was secretary of the Mabel Bartlett Missionary Society for many years and interested in all other community affairs. A good neighbor, no appeal to her sympathy ever fell on deaf ears. Her passing leaves a vacancy in the village that will long be felt.

She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Beulah M. Crider of East Hickory, and Mrs. Marjorie V. Hinman of Niagara Falls, N. Y.; four grandchildren, T/S Charles Crider, serving with the 7th Army in France, Mrs. Betty Hunsdon of Tidououte, Ella Mae Hinman of Niagara Falls, N. Y., Robert Hinman, U. S. Navy, at Sampson, N. Y.; one great grandchild and two sisters, Mrs. Mary Connelly of Ludlow and Mrs. Blanche G. Hoover of Cleveland, Ohio.

First Exploits Breakthrough of Decaying German Defenses Comparable to Victory at St. Lo To Make a Three-Mile Advance

MORE THAN 80 MILES OF EAST RHINE FIRMLY HELD

BULLETIN
U. S. First Army East of the Rhine, March 26—(P)—The First Army made sweeping gains to the east today from a breakthrough from its original Remagen bridgehead. Gen. Eisenhower visited the First Army during the day.

By JAMES M. LONG
Paris, March 26—(P)—The Third Army besieged Frankfurt on the Main today and sent its tanks crashing across the Main at Aschaffenburg into the plains of central Germany, a bare 250 miles from Russian lines.

One unconfirmed report said Frankfurt had been entered. The last "dimmed out" battle accounts hours before had placed Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's mighty shock troops six miles away. The city's radio went dead last night.

The Fourth Armored Division again had burst loose 40 miles beyond the Rhine in a sweep so swift that the Germans were caught without time to blow the Aschaffenburg bridge, 22 miles southeast of Frankfurt. The "breakthrough" division's coup was so complete that Frankfurt was hopelessly outflanked. Frankfurt, a city of 547,000, is the ninth largest in Germany and one of the Reich's greatest railroad centers.

The First Army also broke from its original Rhine bridgehead at Remagen and pushed 19 miles east of the shattered river line.

The U. S. Ninth and Second armies in and north of the Ruhr were ten miles past the river on a solid 31-mile front and battle dispatches *said a general breakout there was expected momentarily.

The Ninth Army mowed in the northeast suburbs of Duisburg, vast inland port of 431,000, and within ten miles of rubble-piled Essen.

The Germans reported fighting outside the Baden capital of Karlsruhe, suggesting yet another crossing by the Seventh Army, which had cleared the Palatinate and routed the last Germans west of the Rhine between Switzerland and Holland.

The First Army to the north exploited another breakthrough of decaying German defenses comparable to the victory at St. Lo, advancing three miles nearer Berlin overnight from the Remagen-Bonn sector. A dozen villages fell.

The American Ninth Army advanced nine miles deeper into the rubble heap of the Ruhr past outflanked Duisburg, deepening its lower Rhine front to at least ten miles. The British Second Army, with at least one famous Canadian division, pushed 10 miles east of the Rhine on the flat Westphalian plains.

More than 80 miles of the east Rhine banks were firmly in Allied hands. The final campaign to crush Germany was rolling up massive victories all the way from Wesel to below Frankfurt.

Nowhere was the bewildered and severely-bled Wehrmacht able to check the mighty tide of more than 1,250,000 shock troops Gen. Eisenhower had massed on the western front for the final battle.

Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's Third Army made new crossings of the upper Rhine. He now has seven bridgeheads. The main river, which flows through Frankfurt, was crossed on a captured bridge at Aschaffenburg and reached at two other points, eight miles southwest of Frankfurt and two miles east of Mainz.

La Guardia Silent On Curfew Issue

New York, March 26—(P)—Mayor F. H. La Guardia added his usual Sunday punch to the city's happenings by stirring up news in four different directions during his weekly radio broadcast yesterday. Unruffled by the apparent collapse of his week-old attempt to extend the city curfew to 1 a. m., the mayor made no mention of it in his speech, but turned his unpredictable attention to sports, the sales tax, meat shortage and an invitation to visit Gen. Charles De Gaulle in Paris.

La Guardia said that he would ask the state legislature to permit New York City to increase its present one per cent sales tax to two per cent.

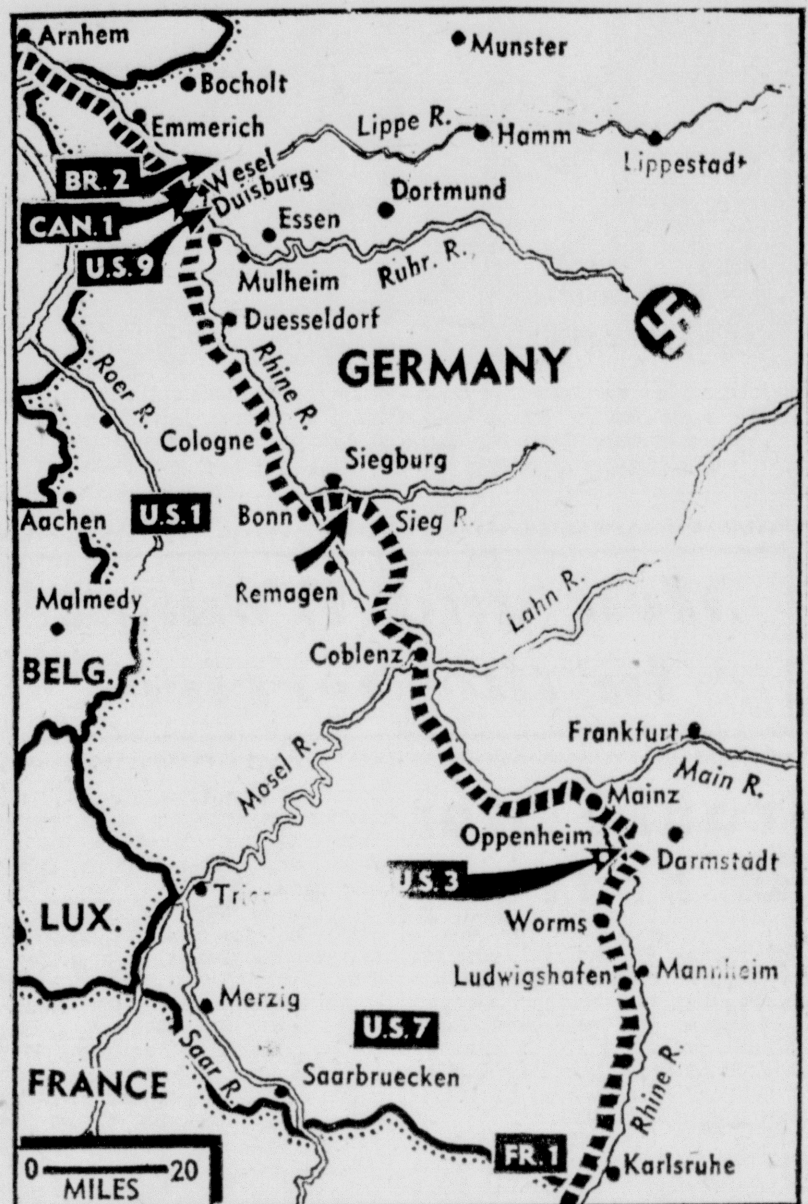

Reporter Finds Prisoners At Toboyhanna Quite Contented

Topyhanna, March 26—(P)—More than 250 German prisoners of war at the Toboyhanna Military Reservation seem to prefer doing chores around this army installation to facing the Allies in their homeland. A. M. Powell, staff writer of The Eastern Express, said after a tour of the camp.

The prisoners appeared to be cheerful, contented and healthy and greeted newspapermen and photographers with broad smiles and grins, Powell said. Officers said they were good workers and no disciplinary measures had been necessary.

Bill Aimed To Make Byrnes Labor Czar

Washington, March 26—(P)—The compromise manpower bill under which War Mobilizer Byrnes could freeze workers to essential jobs headed into further senate opposition today.

Senator O'Mahoney (D-Wyo.) declined as a senate conferee to sign the measure agreed upon by a senate and house group and said he could not support the compromise when it reaches the senate floor. Little opposition was expected in the house, where it will come up tomorrow.

Chairman Thomas (D-Utah) of the senate military committee said he did not know whether the senate would accept the bill.

LANDINGS IN RYUKYU CHAIN ARE REPORTED

American Troops, Backed By Bombardment and Task Force Invading Okinawa Group

MENACES SUPPLY LINES

By ELMONT WAITE
Guam, March 26—(P)—American troops, supported by intensive bombardment from a large carrier-battle ship task force, are "attempting landings on the Okinawa group in the Ryukyu chain, only 325 miles south of Kyushu in the Japanese homeland, Domei News Agency reported without confirmation today.

Aerial bombardment of several of the Ryukyu islands, including Okinawa itself, and of air bases in all of the southern Japanese home islands of Kyushu, Shikoku and Honshu, preceded the reported landings.

Tokyo said Okinawa itself was bombed three times Saturday by U. S. battleships—presumably some of the biggest, newest 16-inch battlewagons in Adm. Raymond A. Spruance's Fifth Fleet. Fleet Adm. Chester W. Nimitz has announced only that Nimitz Daito, 250 miles east of Okinawa, was shelled.

The enemy broadcast, made in English and recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, reported the landings were "tempted on Toka Shima and Aka Jima, small islands west of the southwestern tip of Okinawa."

Okinawa, most important in the Ryukyu chain and an ideal base for strikes at either Japan or the China coast, probably would be the chief objective in any amphibious operation in the central Ryukyus.

Okinawa has several airfields and good harbors suitable for anchorage of large warships.

Tokyo said a powerful U. S. task force of "15 standard and converted carriers, 11 battleships, 10 cruisers, 32 destroyers as well as innumerable auxiliary vessels" was lying southwest of Okinawa to support and protect the landing troops.

Tokyo's statement that 15 carriers were included in the great naval force off Okinawa contradicted its own earlier claim of (Turn to Page Nine)

Perkins May Take Hand In Mine Dispute

Washington, March 26—(P)—Secretary of Labor Perkins is expected to try to stave off a possible nationwide soft coal strike by appealing this week for a 30-day counter extension.

The current wage agreement expires Saturday night, and negotiations between John L. Lewis's United Mine Workers and bituminous operators, which began March 1, have stalled.

Lewis's demand for a 10-cent-a-day royalty is said by the operators to be a big obstacle.

Adding to the tense situation building up as the contract's expiration date approaches, is a strike vote among the 400,000 bituminous miners scheduled for Wednesday. Few would predict that the miners would vote in the negative while Lewis is negotiating a new contract for them.

Broad Probe Launched In Food Shortage

Washington, March 26—(P)—Senators asked today why Great Britain does not get more meat from Canada and less from the United States as they began a broad investigation into the nation's food situation.

Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.) told the agriculture committee he understood the Canadians had ample meat and recommended an inquiry into why more of it is not used for lend-lease.

Saying he agreed that it was a point that should be investigated, Senator Shipstead (R-Minn.) said his information was that butter was rationed in Canada.

"Why can't they send it to Great Britain?" asked Senator Ellender (D-La.).

"The British have to pay for it if they get it from Canada," Shipstead replied.

(Government agencies announced recently that lend-lease meat shipments to Britain are being drastically cut for this quarter.)

As the committee began its hearings, Chairman Thomas (D-Okl.) announced that one aim will be to "uncover and destroy" black markets.

ENEMY SHIFTS FORCES FROM ITALY AND WEST FRONT TO DEFEND ATTACK ON VIENNA

Two Russian Armies Already Overrun Four-Fifths of Hungary With Spearheads Aimed at Austrian Border But 36 Miles Away

BERLIN REPORTS "ALL-OUT OFFENSIVE" MOVE

By the Associated Press
London, March 26—A fourth Russian offensive has been launched toward Germany's southern mountain redoubt, Berlin announced today, and Moscow dispatches said the enemy had shifted divisions from Italy and the sagging western front to defend Vienna against a not distant attack.

Two Russian armies already had overrun four-fifths of Hungary below the Danube and their spearhead was within 36 miles of the Austrian border and 77 miles southeast of Vienna.

Berlin broadcasts said a new assault had been sprung north of the Danube in Slovakia, while Marshal Ivan Konev's First Ukrainian Army group continued to grind through the Moravian mountains north of Vienna.

The newest attack, described in Berlin as an "all-out offensive," was started on the lower reaches of the Hron river in Slovakia at 4 a. m. yesterday, a German broadcast said, and a bridgehead over the Hron was gained at Leva, 50 miles northwest of Budapest and 37 miles northeast of Komarom, the Danube river key to Bratislava.

Marshal Feodor Tolbukhin's Third Ukrainian army and Marshal Rodion Malinovsky's Second Ukrainian army, pushing up the Danube on the south side of that gateway, had left the Vertes mountains and Bakony forest behind them, and were rapidly outflanking Komarom.

Severely mauled, the Germans fell back into a well-fortified triangle formed by the cities of Győr (Raab), Sopron (Odonburg) and Szombathely (Steinamanger), the last big cities of western Hungary.

This area is crisscrossed by the already swollen Marcal, Raba, Csorna and Güns rivers, however, and Moscow dispatches said all signs pointed to the most stubborn opposition despite German losses of 1,000 tanks and 83,000 prisoners in the last few days. Vienna probably will be defended as stoutly as Berlin, Moscow said.

In this area between Lake Balaton and Lake Uusiedler, just inside Austria, the Russians were battering ahead only six miles south of Komarom, 20 miles north-east of Győr.

They were fighting further west, about 15 miles from Győr. To the southwest they were four miles outside Pápa, 25 miles south of Győr and 40 miles east of Szombathely.

Deepest Gloom Pervades Reich

London, March 26—(P)—Gen. Eisenhower's great Rhine offensive has plunged the German people into the deepest gloom, dispatches from neutral European capitals said today, but there seemed general agreement that it still is too early to look for a complete collapse of the German home front.

Advices from Bern said the comparative ease with which the Allied armies swept across the Rhine had started the greatest wave of defeatism and despair yet recorded in Germany.

These dispatches emphasized, however, that even though the German people apparently have lost all hope their fear of the immediate uprising to oust the Nazis and bring a quick peace seems unlikely.

Similar views were expressed by Christa Jaederling, veteran Swedish newspaper correspondent who has just returned to Stockholm from Berlin.

First of Four Noon-Day Holy Week Services Is Held Today

Preaching for the first of the four noonday Holy Week services, the Rev. Beecher M. Rutledge, rector of Trinity Memorial Episcopal church, told his audience today the story of Judas Iscariot, based on those portions of the Scriptures chosen for Matthew 24 and John 13.

These union services, planned each year by the Warren County Ministerial Association, will continue through Thursday in Bethlehem Congregational church in Market street. The time is set for 12:05 to 12:45 for the convenience of the greatest number of persons and a strict schedule is adhered to.

"Personalities on the Pathway to the Cross" is the general theme chosen for this year; the story to be followed by Calphas, Peter and Pilate.

Other ministers participating in the initial service today were Rev. Ernest Kaebnick, Sunday school missionary, who offered the prayer;

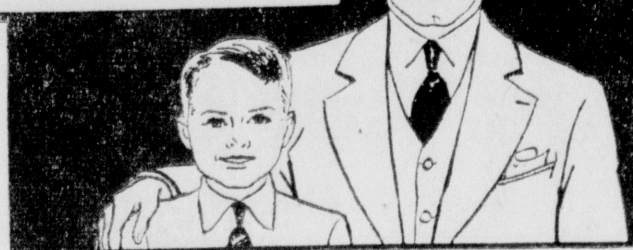

Rev. H. C. Warren, minister of First Presbyterian church, who gave the Scripture passages, and Rev. P. Elmer Landerhill, pastor of Bethlehem Congregational church, who presided and made the announcements.

Miss Melba Olsen, well known young soprano, sang "Were You There When They Crucified My Lord". Her accompaniments, as well as the congregational hymns, were played by the organist of the hostess church.

Continuing a custom of some years' standing, Rotary club members occupied a special section. Lions Club to attend on Tuesday and Kiwanis Club members on Thursday.

Tomorrow's speaker will be a comparative newcomer to town, Rev. William Lane, pastor of Emanuel Evangelical and Reformed church, with Dr. H. A. Rinard and Rev. B. F. Armstrong assisting.

THE STATE POLICE SAY:

Watch the curve. At a moderate speed, little difficulty is experienced in rounding a curve. But trouble usually comes when taking a curve at high speed. A point may be reached where the grip between your tires and the road breaks. This happens frequently on wet roads and is likely to result in your car skidding. A good driver approaches a curve at slow speed and accelerates slightly as the curve is rounded.

GIRLS LENDING AID

In these days of scarcity of help at the Warren General Hospital groups of High School girls have volunteered their assistance and each day several work at the institution following school hours. The girls do dusting, serve water to the patients and distribute trays and otherwise make themselves useful. The girls who are doing this work are worthy of considerable commendation.

RULES MONTH OF JUNE

Sunday, March 25, according to the old time weather seers governs the month of June, a sort of preview. If that be true June will be a wonderful month as the sun shone brightly yesterday and the mercury hovered in the 70s. Permanent park benches in Gen. Warren park third avenue and Pennsylvania avenue had many occupants yesterday and other benches are to be out soon according to plans. The beautiful weather drew out many hikers and Washington Park had scores of visitors some of whom took their lunch to the beauty spot.

GRASS FIRES SUNDAY

There were two grass fires reported in the Complanter Division of Forests and Waters Sunday. One of them was at Endeavor which started from brush burning and two acres of grass were burned over there and one and three-quarters acres of woodland. The other fire was at Cooperstown where three-quarters acres of woodland. The other fire was at Cooperstown where two acres of a 14 year old plantation of young spruce were destroyed and 15 acres of grass went up in fire and smoke. The truck from the Warren office responded to the Endeavor fire.

TWO DRUNKS ARRESTED

Two persons fell into the hands of the police over the week end. One of them was a plain unadorned drunk and the other was an obnoxious member of Uncle Sam's fighting Navy. He staged a battle in Ritchie's Diner early this morning and persons who tried to calm him suffered. A woman had her glasses broken and a man sustained a casualty to his lower lip so that he is eating soup today. The sailor had was found in a physician's office seeking repairs and the cops put him in dry dock at the police station to remove barnacles. Magistrate Greenwood this morning put on the finishing touches.

Short Circuit Caused Blaze Early Saturday

Firemen were called to the Donald Smith automobile display rooms on Water street at 3:45 Saturday morning where a short circuit in the wiring had caused a fire in the kitchen of an apartment over the display room. The short had developed in some manner unknown and the heavy cable carrying the wires had become red hot setting fire to the wall over the kitchen sink. The firemen were forced to cut the wires leading into the building and tear out the wall board over the sink leading to the attic where the fire had followed the wires.

Prompt work held down the damage to about $150 most of which was caused by tearing a hole into the wall to reach the fire. It is expected that an inspection today will force the owner of the building to have much rewiring done.

The fire department responded with Engine Companies No. 1 and No. 2 and the aerial ladder truck from which ladders were used to reach the roof.

Alarm System Gradually Put In Use Again

Mechanics of the fire department have been busy every day since the heavy snow storm of last Wednesday night and alarm circuits 1 and 2 have been restored to use. However the circuits on the East Side and South Side are still out due to the wires being in the creek and river. The river will have to drop considerably before the reconstruction of this system can be undertaken.

Never in the history of the fire alarm system has there been such a complete breakdown in the fire alarm system. Not only the weight of the snow and ice tore down the wires but falling limbs and branches from trees ripped down the wires in many places.

Residents of the East Side and South Side are asked to use telephones in reporting a fire until the damage can be repaired.

Army General Hospitals Are Much In Need of WAC Nurses

"No woman in the United States today would question the necessity of providing every possible care for the wounded of this war. Our wounded men have been given the very best care that the Medical Department could provide and they will continue to receive this care, no matter how hard our present personnel must work to accomplish this. There are many professional jobs that can be performed by rapidly trained personnel, thus freeing the hands of doctors and nurses to do the jobs that require professional training." Thus spoke Major General George F. Lull, Deputy Surgeon General of the Army, referring to WAC hospital companies now being recruited for service in the Army's sixty general hospitals.

WAC technicians—the Blue Angels—trained as women soldiers to assist in care of the sick and wounded. Some are working in x-ray, some in laboratories, some in dental clinics; some in wards and operating rooms; some in the clerical offices of Army general hospitals. Hundreds more are needed. The need is greater and more urgent with each new arrival of a hospital ship or plane.

Ist Lt. Mary A. O'Connor, Commanding Officer, Sgt. Esther V. Packo and Sgt. Claude A. Van Andel, of the Erie VAC Recruitment Headquarters for this District, will be in Warren on Tuesday from 2 until 7 p. m., with offices in the YWCA. Call upon them with regard to your opportunities with the Blue Angels.

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor:

I said years ago when the airport committee turned down the idea of the airport being put on the south side of Warren that I was wrong, but you know the whole story, so I won't go into detail about it.

But the time has come when the city should do something about it. I am enclosing clipping from Erie Dispatch that explains what one of our neighbors are doing and I think that if Warren is going to ever get out of that low spot and have a real airport something should be started now.

I will be glad to go with you and look it over again like we did several years ago. Had it not been for high pressure Ferris the project would have been on the hill now and enlargement from what they already have spent would have given us an airport as good as not far superior to a lot of them.

H. D. Putnam.

The newspaper article referred to follows:

Jamestown, N. Y., March 21—City council last night voted authorization for the city to purchase from the board of public welfare a tract of 81 acres of land adjacent to the municipal airport for future extension of runways and further development of airport facilities.

The land was acquired by the welfare board in 1942 through purchase of a mortgage on the property to protect the board's interest in a title acquired through an old age assistance case. It was acquired with a view to turning it over to the city at a later date for expansion of the airport. The cost to the city will be $680.90, according to city resolution.

Acquisition of the property, which lies across Turner rd., a town thoroughfare, from the airport proper, will make possible the extension of the northwest-southeast runway to the point where it will be adaptable for the landing of any size plane, according to Samuel C. Alessi, corporation counsel. The land lies at the northwest corner of the airport property and in direct line with the present northwest-southeast runway.

City council also approved a resolution authorizing Mr. Alessi to prepare a petition requesting permission for the city to intervene in the Civil Aeronautics board hearing on the application of Page Airways, Inc., and others, for an airline franchise in Western New York and Pennsylvania.

Mr. Alessi will prepare the petition and if it is approved, the city will receive notice of all hearings in the case, and have an opportunity to introduce testimony, cross-examine witnesses and take other action which may be to the city's interest in the case. Mr. Alessi said that it is probable that the city will have a representative at all hearings in the case the petition is approved.

SURPRISE SNOW STORM

About eight inches of snow fell Wednesday night, and though the snow clinging to the trees and outlining all electric wires appeared beautiful Thursday, it did considerable damage about town, particularly to trees. The weight of the snow broke down some large trees and many branches were on the ground. The creek is high over its banks in some places but doing little, if any damage at this time.

Telephone Service for Farms Explained To Lander Grange

New developments in building telephone lines, which have made it possible to reduce the cost of providing telephone service for farms, were described last evening by C. H. Springer, assistant manager, of the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania, speaking at the Farmington Grange meeting at Lander.

He pointed out that approximately 96 percent of the rural families in the Bell Telephone Company's territory may now be reached by telephone lines without any charge to new customers for public highway construction.

The new developments and reduced charges made telephone installation much cheaper, both for public highway construction in excess of one-half mile, and for private property construction—the latter in cases where the farmhouse is located some distance from the nearest public road.

The Bell Telephone Company will now build up to 2640 feet of pole line along a public highway to serve a new customer, instead of the previous 1600 feet, Mr. Springer said. Construction charges beyond a half-mile limit have been reduced to $5 for each 100 feet. Previously, they were $5 for each 50 feet.

Mr. Springer also said that in the very few cases where farms are located more than a half-mile from the nearest telephone line, it is often possible for applicants to obtain service without construction charges. He explained that this can be accomplished by averaging the half-mile construction allowance among a group of neighboring farmers.

By means of a large exhibit, he illustrated how two farmers, one 3000 feet away from the nearest telephone line and the other 4800 feet away, could both get service without construction charges, because the total distance results in less than a half mile of construction for each farmer.

The speaker described several construction methods employed by the company. One was an improved, heavily insulated wire which can be buried where the soil is suitable. This wire also can be used in some cases on private property where a pole line ordinarily would be needed to reach the house from the nearest public road.

In such instances, the telephone company representative said, the company will lay the wire without charge if the farmer will plow a furrow.

Where a pole line over private property is necessary from the highway to the farmhouse, the farmer can build this himself and the company will string the wire without charge. Or the company will build the pole line at the rate of $12 per pole, while his reduction from $18 previously charged, it was explained.

Another method discussed is what is known as "long-span" construction. This type of telephone line employs a strong, steel wire which is highly resistant to severe storm conditions, thus assuring a minimum of interruptions to the service due to the weather.

The new developments in the rural telephone field are part of a program in which the Bell Telephone Company has been interested for a great many years, the speaker said. From 1935 to 1944 the number of rural telephones in service has increased by 78 percent in the Bell Telephone Company's territory. A considerable part of this increase has occurred since 1940.

"We have all felt the pinch of wartime restrictions," he said. "These restrictions have slowed down our rural development program, but only temporarily."

"Today, about one-third of all the nation's farms have telephone service. A recent study of farm development here in Pennsylvania indicates that 43 percent of the farms have service in the territory of the Bell Telephone Company."

"We have learned a lot about new methods of construction and new materials. Some of the things we have learned are already in use. When the war production program relaxes, it will make possible the manufacture of quantities of telephone equipment for civilian use. As a result, we will find it possible to expand our rural service more rapidly and more readily. This expansion will take place just as quickly as materials and manpower are once again available."

WAR'S GREATEST OPERATION

The most important news of the moment is that the Allied armies which have stormed across the Rhine in the greatest operation of its kind in history are so firmly installed on German soil east of this mighty river that they cannot be thrown back to the west side—they definitely are there to stay and to continue their drive into the Reich.

This doesn't mean there won't be heavy enemy resistance in some areas. The time of major counterattacks by the Nazis is yet to come and we must expect these, especially in the north between Emmerich and the Ruhr. Here the Germans have their best troops—including their crack First Paratroop Army, which also comprises tanks and infantry—to protect this strategic gateway to the Westphalian plain that flanks the Ruhr and leads to Berlin.

It is the particular ambition of the Allies to force the Hitlerites to stand and fight on that northern flank, which is adapted to tank warfare. If that battle eventually it will be a fight to a finish, our immediate objective being the utter annihilation of this German army.

Nazi Field Marshal Kesselring, who has been brought up from the Italian theatre to supplant Field Marshal von Rundstedt, is no Napoleonic genius but he is a capable and determined fighter. Perhaps more important, he is said to be staunchly loyal to Hitler.

Thus far, however, German resistance on the whole has been weak. Kesselring hasn't anything like sufficient troops to defend that long Rhenish front. He is facing more than 1,250,000 Allied troops, and if he has half that number he is exceedingly lucky. Even if he has, they're far inferior in quality.

One of the most important phases of this titanic Allied offensive is that wild drive straight into the heart of the Reich by the racing armored columns of General Patton, who again is proving his right to the nickname of "Old Blood and Guts". What a man—and what troops!

This sensational thrust by Patton's Third Army may prevent the Nazi forces to the north from ultimately retreating southward into the Bavarian Alps where Hitler has prepared a "fortress" in the Berchtesgaden region for a final stand. Of course it's too soon to predict such a development, but it certainly must be considered as a possibility at this writing.

Should Patton achieve this it would be one of the great coups of the war. Undoubtedly it would shorten the conflict by reducing the number of troops Hitler may be able to collect in this Alpine region. The Fuehrer is said to have made great preparations in the way of assembling supplies and building fortifications for this final defense in the mountains.

LENTEN SERMONETTE

REV. HAROLD C. WARREN

John 10:17—I lay down my life . . . No man taketh it from me.

All down the history of the Christian centuries, the genius that has illumined the pathway of human progress has been the genius of the blazing heart. We need not dicker philosophy or science or practical worldly wisdom and material achievement; we know their importance. But we know where they lead if left to themselves. Look around you today; see the spiritual suicide, pessimism, despair in the world. But society has been purified, human life sweetened, human hopes strengthened by those whose hearts have been warmed by the contagion of the living Christ.

He Himself is the supreme example. "I lay down my life," He said. "No man taketh it from me." There is an explanation of His victory amid apparent defeat: No one COULD have taken His life had He resisted. While dreaming of the Kingdom of God in the little town of Nazareth, He might have kept the dreams to Himself, and lived and died the supreme Sybarite, the Epicure of His own emotions. But He deliberately chose to stand forth as the preacher of that kingdom, giving His life for it. He might easily have fallen in line with the rabbis of His day, a brilliant young teacher from Galilee, the favorite of the schools, instead of serving the people. But He deliberately chose to be the friend of publicans and sinners. "The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister and to give his life a ransom for many." He could have evaded the frowning cross, escaping from Jerusalem where His enemies plotted. But He chose to die for their sakes, a prayer for them upon His lips. His death, like His life, was one of unselfish love.

He is the lonely and splendid example of one who was naturally for others more than man; but by choice for Himself, only man. The lame and prostrate were reformed at His touch into strength and vigor, yet He Himself had to rest by a wayside well and ask water to quench His thirst. Although He restored Lazarus to life, He would not escape the cross. "He endured the cross, despising the shame, for the joy that was set before him."

This is the Leader who reaches out His hand to us, as He calls us to travel the way of the cross, to climb the steep ascent of heaven through peril, toil and pain. Pray God, "To us may grace be given, to follow in His train."

Some therefore cried one thing, and some another: for the assembly was confused; and the more part knew not wherefore they were come together.—The Acts 19:32.

"What Can You Spare That They Can Wear?"

"My report on UNRRA," President Roosevelt said, "revealed that as many war victims have died from exposure and lack of adequate clothing as have died from starvation."

Second Marriage

By EVELYN MURRAY CAMPBELL

YESTERDAY: Cynthia's attempt to placate the children and get them to like Carey is pathetic. Eris was the most difficult of all to handle while Vera simply stayed away from the house as much as possible. The office did not take much of her time now and Cynthia did not know what to do with herself.

Chapter 12

IT WAS disconcerting not to be needed. Maud ran the house beautifully and the children were entirely independent with their own concerns, their own plans. She had been the charming visitor who came to dinner every night but she did not know them intimately. Cynthia told herself this with a wry smile but it was the truth and left her at loose ends when she stayed at home. So why should she?

There were other things she could do. For one, she bought a flock of gay prints and organzas though it was so late in the season and in spite of the huge bills of the former month. She had spent so much time in street clothes that now she lost her head completely with the help of a saleswoman anxious to thin her stock.

"Madame is so very slender. She can wear the very young frocks. Even a fourteen is a little—we will try a twelve—"

"Heavens, no!" Cynthia gasped. "Fourteen is young enough. The seams can be taken up."

"But it is not the age, only the size that is fourteen," blundered the woman, tactless, and Cynthia murmured, "Oh," deflated.

She had never cared about looking young until now. She hadn't given youth a thought as it slipped away from her and if it lingered longer than with other women she knew, she had not been unduly elated about it. But now she wanted pretty things and got them, too. The fitting room mirrors were flattering and somebody called her "Miss."

Vera was at home when the boxes came. "Trousseau?" There was a bite in her voice that didn't belong there.

YESTERDAY: Cynthia buys a flock of new gowns and as Vera watches her put them away, she loses all joy in them when Vera remarks, "That was a lousy thing to do. Mother. You're selfish and think of yourself only. Marriage is one's own affair—or should be. But usually it isn't when it interferes frightfully with other people's plans." Then make new ones, retorts Cynthia. I'll have to, cries Vera, as she rushes from the room.

Chapter 13

CYNTHIA'S pleasure in her new frocks was spoiled. She hung them away without interest. But she had cause to remember them when Carey opened the closet door and saw the array. From the first time they had been together he had noticed her clothes with quick, keen appreciation for color and form. But now there was something else in his face. She would have called it disapproval if that had not been so preposterous.

"You've been on a buying spree, Cynthia?"

"I had to have something new. We'll be going out a lot. Carey, as soon as my friends learn about us. After all," she laughed a little, "one doesn't get married every day."

"That's true," he said slowly, as if he picked his words. "I'm afraid my own wardrobe doesn't stack up with this, Cynthia."

"Then, order a new one." She spoke lightly but it dawned upon her that Carey didn't seem to have much wardrobe of any sort. His bags had only bare essentials—an outfit that was well enough at a summer camp wasn't quite the thing now.

He looked at her. "I won't need a new one." The work I do doesn't call for dressing up and I wouldn't have the time if I wanted to wear them. What did this stuff cost?"

She was so taken aback that she could not answer for a moment. He was questioning her just as Vera had done but for another reason.

"Why ask me that?"

"Because I want to pay for them, of course."

She burst out laughing. "Pay

Cynthia said, "One would have thought you were buying your own last month."

Slow color came into Vera's lovely ivory skin that no sea or sun could spoil and Cynthia was instantly remorseful. They had never quarreled or had mother-daughter enmity between them. They shouldn't have said that. I hope you'll show me your pretty things after you've looked at mine."

VERA was moody over the boxes spilling riots of color. She didn't offer to help with the hangers but sat in a slipper chair hugging her knees.

"That was a lousy thing for you to do, mother."

Cynthia was so startled by the odd, hoarse voice that she dropped the dress she was holding up to admire. "Vera!"

"Yes, it was!" Vera shrugged. "You heard, but I'll say it again. A messy trick, then. It made us all feel silly before people. One's own mother running off, getting married to somebody we didn't know."

Cynthia trembled. Suddenly she was "having it out" with Vera who more than the others had seemed to take the debacle with composure. Vera was now taking her to task.

"It was a selfish thing to do. But you've always been selfish."

Cynthia waited a moment before she said, "Why selfish? It's my life. It hasn't interfered with yours in any way. Or with the other's." She ignored the "always."

It was too ridiculous. Faint derision touched Vera's lips.

"Don't you think so? You're our mother. What you do affects us more or less."

"And how did my marriage affect you?" Cynthia kept herself under control. This was only Vera, her child, but she had to know how she felt. Vera, she closed, the guarded. There might be something undone that she could meet and conquer.

"Well—we had always looked up to you, you know, as if you were mother and father, too, in one person. Wise, you know, in every way. We thought you knew all the answers and that we could always count on you. And then you do this—come home with a handkerchief tied over your head, bringing in this man we've never even heard of—this young man—"

"Carey can't be left out. He's the root of it. But I'm not blaming him. Lots of men would have done the same thing. Pretty soft for Carey."

"You are vulgar," Cynthia said coldly. It was horrible and hateful beyond words. She didn't have to listen but she did. And a hateful little piping voice within her kept saying over and over that it wasn't vulgar at all. It was only cold facts told in a cold fashion and what other people's strangers who didn't know, would say. "All right, go on," she said. "But first I want to admit that I was wrong, not in marrying Carey but because I didn't tell you in time for you to get used to the idea. To use your common sense. It was only because it seemed so very much our own affair."

Vera nodded in calm agreement. "Marriage is one's own affair—or should be. But usually it isn't. When it interferes so frightfully with other people's plans—"

Cynthia laughed and this relieved the tension. The absurdity of the grave girl using psychology like that!

"Oh, did you have plans?" She picked up the fallen frock.

Vera did not reply. Her silence was ominous. She moved to the dressing table and began to brush her silky hair. She was ivory pale again and the situation was not completed as Cynthia had hoped.

"Hurry, everyone—even the children. But now everything is knocked into a cocked hat."

"I'm sorry," Cynthia said, cool again. She had had enough. She tried to speak lightly, dismissing the whole thing. "Can't you make some new plans? Something to fit in with my own?"

"I have to have to it, seems," Vera said, and went out of the room taking the brush with her.

gave her one of the looks that be-longed between them. "All I want is you, Cynthia, when I come back to you."

"So she called Myra Conway and explained that Carey's work at the plant was so arduous that—Myra responded with one of her gibes. "So you really did marry a working man—"

"Don't we all work?" Cynthia was bland.

THERE was one party though that couldn't be refused. Ned Almon gave it at the Miramar on a dance night. Ned and Cynthia had gone to these dinner dances together, season after season, meeting the same people and sometimes delightful new ones.

Carey capitulated. "All right, if someone's feeling just best, I'll go. I'll read poor Ned at a glance and was gloriously non-jealous—too much so. His white teeth gleamed in his dark young face and for a moment he was as he had been on the trip across country. "I'll scrub for the occasion."

But there was no occasion as it turned out. His return from the plant was always uncertain—it might be four or six and this was one of the late times. Cynthia dressed very early in one of the new frocks but at a quarter of seven there was no sign of the battered black car. Of course it was a long way to Burbank—the traffic might be heavy. A dozen things might have happened. . . . Only one had.

The belated telephone told her. "I couldn't make it, my girl. Something came up that can't be ditched. Brandy and I are up to the neck—"

"Where are you now?"

"At Brandy's house." Innocent surprise. "Joan picked up us some supper. I say, Cynthia, can't you run over there yourself or let Almon know? It's not important. Just a party—"

She couldn't say anything. Her throat felt as if the pearl necklace was strangling her.

Carey hung up blithely.

"I did it myself," she said aloud as if someone had accused her. "Nobody is to blame—not even Carey."

Relatives Return From Wedding In Boston Cathedral

Mrs. Ralph Dey, of North Warren, and Mrs. John Laufberger and Mrs. Edna Andregg, of Olean, N. Y., have returned from the wedding of their sister, Garnet Laufberger, formerly of North Warren but now of Brooklyn, N. Y., to Dr. Peter Peris, also of Brooklyn.

The ceremony took place on March 18 at 3 p. m. in the Evangelical Cathedral in Boston. The wedding was taken before an altar banked with snapdragons, stock and iris. The bride's gown was of white satin with lace bertha and long train and she held a fingertip veil held in place with a cluster of sea pearls. Her bouquet was of calla lilies. Her matron of honor was her sister, Mrs. Andregg, who wore yellow satin with aqua accessories and a blue and yellow tulle of flowers. She carried narcissi and blue iris. Bridesmaids were Ruth Peris, sister of the bridegroom, and a school chum, both with the Marine Corps Women's Reserve and on furlough from San Diego, Calif. They wore Alice blue gowns with matching veils and carried bouquets of Talisman roses. The bridegroom's mother wore purple satin with a shoulder corsage of orchids. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, John Laufberger, and Master George Patrick, cousin of the bridegroom, acted as ring bearer. John Boris and John Kelkas were groomsmen.

Following the wedding, a reception for 200 guests was held at the Hotel Gardner, with dancing following the dinner.

After a short honeymoon, the couple will return to Brooklyn, where Dr. Peris will resume his duties at Unity Memorial Hospital.

The bride, a graduate of Warren High School, class of 1938, and of W. C. A. Hospital in Jamestown. Dr. Peris, graduate of English High School and Middlesex University in Boston, served his internship at Unity Hospital and since his graduation has been retained on the staff.

Master Points to Be Given Bridge Tourney Winners

The second annual tournament of the Jamestown O'Connell Bridge Club will be held at Hotel Jamestown April 7, according to Mrs. Herbert Olson, president. At this tournament, sponsored by the American Contract Bridge League, the 1945 open pair contract championship of Chautauque county will be decided. Winners last year were Mrs. Sam Lundquist and Mrs. Leon Witte, of Jamestown, and runners-up were Miss Charlotte Sidway and W. Howard Woolworth, of Buffalo.

The Jamestown tournament committee, fully aware of the difficulties of transportation, have decided to hold only one complete game. Play will start promptly at 1:45 p. m. Players later must accept their decisions.

Entries for the open pair championship will close at 1 p. m. the same day. This game will be played in two sessions, afternoon and evening, and any pair of players, men, women or mixed, is eligible. However, all desiring to take part and compete for the championship honor must enter for both sessions.

There will be a consolation game in the evening for those eliminated in the afternoon. Visiting players will be guests at an informal reception following the tourney.

Rules and entries will be governed by the ACBL regulations for duplicate play and master points will be awarded the winners and runners-up in conformance with ACBL rules. Manner of scoring will be announced from the floor by the tournament director, Mrs. Conrad Nelson.

Allen Gibson, of Warren, is a member of the tourney ways and means committee and Dr. R. H. Israel is on the laws committee.

Troop 51 of Pleasant township will give a choral reading under the leadership of Mrs. Marshall Morrow. A group of leaders of intermediate Girl Scout troops will give a shadowgraph which was prepared at a training meeting last week.

An inventive ceremony for new adult members will take place at the end of the meeting. Announcement will be made of plans for the celebration of the tenth anniversary of the Warren County Girl Scout Council.

Warren Independents Cop Invitational Tournney Title

Running Romance

Gunder Hagg hasn't been able to consistently hit top form during his current American tour, but the swift Swede wins this one. Holder of multiple distance records is expected to wed Dorothy Nortier, of Piedmont, Calif. Couple renewed courtship in Chicago.

Brilliant Last Half Stand Enables Locals to Cop 35-31 Decision Over Bradford

Forced to expend every bit of strength they had, the Warren Independents managed to edge the Bradford YMCA night on the local YM court, 35-31, and collect the second annual Invitational Tournament championship. The Independents, all high school boys who will return to the Dragon scholastic squad next year, put on a blast of power in the final two stanzas to overcome a 17-14 half-time deficit and emerge the winner by a four-point margin.

Following the game, Captain Alan Babcock, 6'3" Indies guard, was presented with the tournament trophy. The trophy is a statuette of a basketball player, with arms outstretched and holding a basketball, mounted on an oak base. The trophy will be presented to the boys' coach, Joseph Massa.

The local cagers failed to find themselves in the first two quarters, while in the meantime, Ray Colosimo was pacing the Bradfordites to a slight margin. Bradford held almost complete control in the first period, managing to keep the Warren height advantage from interfering with their attempted victory march. During the first three minutes the lead see-sawed back and forth, but the out-of-towners succeeded in gaining and holding a three-point margin to end the first quarter, 12-9.

The ex-Dragons started to manipulate a little more skillfully in the second stanza, their zone defense protecting them from any Bradford scoring spree. Both teams connected for five markers in this quarter. The half-time whistle sounded with the Bradford Y crew maintaining their slight lead, 17-14.

With the towering giants Eaton, Babcock, and Reed gaining the bankboard and rebound control and Eaton, Babcock, and Gray setting the scoring pace, the Independents marched back in the third period to outpoint their opponents, 12-8, and move ahead for the first time since the opening canto. Bradford forced the locals to the limit, but the boys managed to keep their lead when the period ended.

Jack Eaton was the locals' top scorer, collecting 9, while Babcock and Gray accounted for 8 and 7, respectively. Ray Reed did a brilliant ball-hawking job, which was instrumental in keeping the Warren aggregation in the ballgame.

Going into the final stanza with a meager one-point margin, the locals put out every bit of knowledge they had. The lead changed hands frequently before the Indies could establish a somewhat strong margin late in the period.

With a matter of minutes remaining, Warren secured a five-point lead through their excellent board shots. Eaton and Babcock together put in 7 baskets on rebounds. Bradford concluded their scoring with a foul shot and the final whistle sounded with the Independents on the long end of the 35-31 count.

In the preliminary, an all-star quint replaced the Kane Independents, somewhere unable to be here. Struthers succeeded in wallowing the pick-up crew, 64-49, with Ted Kaminsky and Dick Finley pacing the Wellsmen and Gail Nelson leading the losers.

Does Al Wolfe Rate as the Best Cager W.H.S. Ever Had? Changes Make Explanation

PRO
By Fritz Kennett

Sports Editor:
Couldst I but have one more word with you pertaining to the best basketball player who ever wore the Blue and White of Warren—and avoid this hedging the issue? You struck below the belt twice in your last answer which has just come to hand. First off you had the audacity to call a New York Stater and secondly to bring in some cracks about automobiles. I handed you the glue pot once before but you still refuse to stick to the issue at hand, namely "Al Wolfe was the best basketball player that ever represented Warren."

First things first. I still consider myself a Keystoner, whether your opinion has been slated for N. Y. State or not. My best years of play were all spent in Pa., and I still think my best friends are located in the town of Warren. I do hope you got that straight. Secondly, about that 1922 or 1942 model car. It's so easy to answer that question with a question. Wine is no good unless it's aged. A good painting is never recognized until it is aging and its author dead or on his last legs. And furthermore, me bonny lad, if you were of the 1942 vintage and attempted to have a pint of blood extracted from your system for the Red Cross blood bank would they recognize it, or would they pass it by and take the good old plasma from the 1922 year? Don't lead with your chin, age is an essential at times.

To date you have said or done nothing to refute my statement about Wolfe's capabilities on the court. Players may come and go at Warren High, but until I am reliably informed, I will be out there staunch in my stand for the Big Bad Wolfe. I will look back over the records you will find that he made the varsity in his first year out and then played two more years. In all those three years he was a standout performer, never dogging it and always being up there with the top scorers and usually leading them—even when he was playing under the handicap of a taped up back as the result of a sprain which he received in one of his all-out efforts. That I think finishes me up. If you refuse to take my word as to his capabilities, then on your next trip around the loop, converse with some of the coaches who have not aged too much and still remain at their tasks. If you can't locate any of them it will probably be that they died happy to think they would not have to face such a performer in years to come. Thanks.

CON
By Richard Harris

Sticking to the issue, "Al Wolfe was the best basketball player that ever represented Warren," is of utmost importance to my competitor. My answer to the "gluepot query" comes in the form of age, as does Sportsman Kennett's referral to the quality of wine, recognition of a painting, or the blood donor. (By the way, I believe there is a law which states that donors must be eighteen years of age or older, which does not include myself, Mr. Kennett.) There is each month at the Library Theatre a short called "Time Marches On," which stands as the basis for my reply to the standing question. If my readers and my competitor will take time to read Ray Peebles' "Sideline Gossip" in the March 21 edition of the Erie Dispatch-Herald, you will see another of the many modern writers' views on the changes which have come about in the coge sport during the passing years. Quote, "If you want to obtain a full realization of the changes that have come about in basketball during the past few years, just try your hand at officiating. This corner (Ray Peebles) did it the other night and is still trying to find out what was going on out there on the floor. As I was making my way slowly but steadily down the sideline after calling a foul on one of the members of the coaches' team, Red Cochrane shouted from the bench: 'Hey, Ray, that's the way it used to be. Things have changed!' They certainly have."

Now, belittling Al Wolfe is not my purpose, but all I wish to do is to point out to some people's minds the fact that the changes which have been made in the game during the last twenty years have changed the complexion of almost every phase of it. Trivial are matters such as (1) A team still consists of five men; or (2) Scoring is the main thing in the game.

I'll venture to say that no 1923-45 team ever met what is properly labeled a zone defense. No doubt Mr. Kennett has seen the defense in action, and no doubt he has to admit that is a tough thing to break. When five men making up a basketball team run into such a setup, it is extremely hard to make an exceptionally large number of points. Where they are most successful in gaining their most points is in what Mr. Kennett calls the "Racehorse game." That statement stands well cemented on its base, but that just calls for more work, plug, and speed on the part of the players.

I'll also venture to say that the over-six-foot class did not prevail in the sport in the early '20s as it does today, which also demands a bit of reasoning. My argument has ventured from the original question, but it points out that there were a lot of factors in the game during 1924 which Wolfe did not face and which the players of the modern ages are meeting. Just what could Wolfe and his exceptional shooting ability have done against some of the barriers which dominate the sport today? That is the Number One question. If course, Wolfe was a good shot and an excellent player, but the game has CHANGED.

HAM 'N RYE

Wilmington, Del., March 26—(P)—Phillies Manager Fred Fitzsimmons finally found a way to distinguish between Granville and Garvin Hammer, ball-playing brothers, whose similar names and similar appearances confuse one and all in the Phillies' camp.

He asked each Hammer, "What do they call you?"—and each replied: "Ham."

Fitz threw up his hands.

"Guess we'll have to call you two ham 'n rye," he grumbled.

IRE 4 TO 1 FAVORITE

Philadelphia, March 26—(P)—Lightweight Ike Williams' incorrigible backers made him a 4 to 1 favorite today to take the measure of Dorsey Lay, Philadelphia, in a ten-round fight at the Arena tonight. Some experts, picked Lay. The Trenton, N. J., negro, if he wins tonight, gets a crack at National Boxing Association champion Juan Zurita in a title bout April 18 in Mexico City. If he loses, the match is off. Ike lost prestige when Willy Willie Joyce defeated him in Madison Square Garden March 2.

POOR EXAMPLE

Miami, Fla., March 26—(P)—Dashing Don Meade, whose stormy riding career twice before was interrupted by long suspensions, was back on the ground today, and in dutch with the jockey guild to boot. A few hours after Meade was set down by stewards of the Hipodrome De Las Americas at Mexico City for "reprehensible conduct" General Manager A. J. (Jack) Cleary announced that he had also been suspended from the Riders' Organization. "I learned that no question of racing integrity was involved," Cleary said, "but that Meade cursed Mexicans in individuals and Mexico as a country."

COACHES MEET

W. H. S. Basketball Mentor Joseph Massa and Athletic Director J. B. Leidig are in Mendville today conferring with District Ten, Section Two, coaches. The 1945-6 schedules will be made at the meeting.

L. MERION GYMNAST WINNER

State College, March 26—(P)—Lower Merion High scored 44 points to win the PIAA gymnastic team title for the second successive year Saturday. Pottsville finished second with 31. Lower Merion's Joe Rossi set a record of four seconds for the 18-foot rope climb.

In the preliminary, an all-star quint replaced the Kane Independents, somewhere unable to be here. Struthers succeeded in wallowing the pick-up crew, 64-49, with Ted Kaminsky and Dick Finley pacing the Wellsmen and Gail Nelson leading the losers.

Donora Quint Beaten, 40-38, By Allentown

By TOM SHRIVER
Philadelphia, March 26—(P)—In one of the wildest finishes in scholastic basketball annals, Allentown High Saturday night won the state PIAA championship from a game Donora team, 40-38.

With one second left to play, a foul was called against Allentown. The gun barked and Referee Jocko Collins signalled the Class A title game was ended.

Donora protested, saying it was entitled to the foul try.

Officials and rival coaches conferred with the timekeeper.

It was finally decided that Donora should be given the opportunity to try for a foul shot or take the ball out of bounds in the last second of play.

The Canaries returned. Donora made one pass from the sidelines and the game ended.

The victory gave the Canaries

their second state title. They won in 1935 by defeating Rankin 32-19.

Allentown, eastern regional champions was heavily favored over the Donora Dragons, western Pennsylvania winners. It was the first time the western school had advanced beyond District 7 eliminations.

The Westerners showed power in the first half to take a 20-15 lead at intermission. But in the second half, Bill Wanish started a scoring spree that moved Allentown ahead. Midway through the final period, the Canaries were in front 37-30.

Donora then started a last-ditch fight. The Allentown lead was reduced until a field goal and a foul by Andy Leik brought the Dragons within two points of their rivals—with 40 seconds to go.

From here on to the final whistle both teams set a fast pace to keep possession of the ball. The game ended without any further scoring.

Planes Hunt Under-ground Objectives

By HENRY B. JAMESON
Last night Mosquitoes attacked Berlin for the 34th consecutive night and American night-proving planes joined in hammering German targets. The night attacks followed yesterday's pulverizing of German strongpoints and reinforcement centers in front of Field Marshal Montgomery's drive into the Ruhr by thousands of Allied planes.

The kickoff of the campaign against hidden underground objectives was made yesterday by a force of 250 British-based Liberators which attacked three buried oil storage dumps between Hamburg and Brunswick.

Altogether, 6,000 sorties were flown yesterday, with the Liberators reporting good results against the underground oil targets at Eimhen, Buchen and Hitzacker and with 800 RAF heavy planes smashing at freight yards at Hannover, Osnabrueck and Muenster.

Approximately 6,000 German vehicles of all types from tanks to wagons were destroyed by the Tactical Air Forces over Rhine bridgeheads.

The German air force put up little fan token resistance. In Italy, Lt. Gen. Ira C. Eaker, chief of the Mediterranean Allied air force, declared the "luftwaffe is virtually grounded."

The Mediterranean Allied air force, carrying out 2,500 sorties yesterday, set a new low in losses.

That was the first of a series of close calls crowded into the next 24 hours in the "Little Armies" these British airborne soldiers and I had for ourselves.

Control of the East China sea would be possibly the war's greatest single step toward cutting Japan's lines of sea communication with the Netherlands East Indies and other stolen territory to the southwest which produce war-vital rubber, oil and other supplies.

Ration Board Issues Message To All Truckers

The local war price and rationing board issues the following emergency statement to truck owners of the section:

We are compelled to warn you, or at least about half of you, that you will not have your second quarter rations early in April. We sent your applications out the first week in March. We wanted them made out and returned to us promptly. We said as much several times in the newspaper and on the air.

Everything was arranged to give you the best service. Apparently it is difficult to anticipate in March how badly you will need gasoline in April.

When you come up to our office this week and explain to Mrs. Hethrington how much you need transport rations in your business, remember the application you could have mailed to us three weeks ago, thereby saving the gasoline you have used in your car driving to this office. Please accept our assurances we will tell you just how quickly we can mail you your second quarter T coupons and will mean it when we say we are sorry we could not send it sooner. Applications received by Tuesday, will be mailed right out.

Wheat Train Wrecked Near Tambine Road

Sixteen freight cars loaded with wheat from the grain boats in Erie harbor on their way east were piled up Saturday near the Tambine road leading off Route 119. None of the crew were reported injured and the wrecking crew from Warren was summoned.

Just what caused the derailment is not known and the first 14 cars of the number derailed piled high in a space of about 250 feet. Some of the cars were thrown almost on to the highway nearby and the rail line was effectively plugged up. Cars were overturned, upended and smashed while grain was strewn over a long distance. Some 300 feet of the track was torn out.

Rail traffic during the tie-up which existed until early Sunday morning was rerouted up the river to Olean and through to Emporium. A bus was run from Emporium through to Warren Saturday evening carrying passengers and mail.

Wrecking crews worked all of Saturday afternoon and night get-

No Overtime On Front Lines Soldier Writes

A recent letter home from Pfc. Robert J. List of Grand Valley should open the eyes of persons who won't work because he doesn't like his wages. The soldier, writing from his base just behind the front lines on the western front, says:

"We hear a lot about the people in America who don't want to work in the middle of the week because it isn't double time, but they will work on Sundays to get double time. They should stop and look at the fellows on the front lines, who can't stop fighting when they want to just because they aren't getting paid double time. They are fighting day after day for the same price every month. They are doing this for you and also for themselves in time to come, that we will have a peaceful and happy life."

"So let's not think about the money. Let's think about the fellows on the front lines. Just say to yourselves, 'The more work I do the more it will help the front-line fellows and the sooner the war will be over.'"

Pvt. List is an ambulance driver in a medical collecting company and, no doubt it was his seeing wounded and mutilated men that inspired him to make the above plea to fellow Americans.

His letter contains high praise for the men of the front lines. "The fighting men are going through a hard struggling battle and are doing a wonderful job. They are men to be proud of," wrote Pvt. List. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy List of Grand Valley.

Grain movements now are heavy as there is a rush on in the harbor at Erie to get the grain boats there unloaded so that they can start up the lakes as the ice is now nearly out of the great lakes and some boats are already in commission.

EMMA KESTER MILLER

(Special to Times-Mirror)
Mrs. Emma Kester Miller, daughter of Lewis and Mary Jane Kester, was born at East Hickory, July 18, 1862, and died March 12, 1945. She was a life-long resident of East Hickory and taught several years in the public schools of Forest county.

In 1886 she was married to James T. Miller of Renfrew, Ontario, Canada, who preceded her in death September 30, 1944. In 1926 they celebrated their golden wedding anniversary. The large number of old friends present attested to the love and esteem in which they were both held.

Mrs. Miller was the last surviving charter member of the Ladies Aid and active in its work up to within a few weeks of her death. She was secretary of the Mabel Bartlett Missionary Society for many years and interested in all other community affairs. A good neighbor, no appeal to her sympathy ever fell on deaf ears. Her passing leaves a vacancy in the village that will long be felt.
